Waldheim Faces a New Contender From Third World in Election Bid

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Nov. 15nother third-world diplomat threw his name into consideration for the post of secretary general today, threatening the chances of the incumbent. Kurt Waldheim of Austria, for election to a second five-

In a cautiously worded statement, Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe of Sri Lanka, oresident of this year's General Assembly, declared his willingness to serve in the United Nations' top executive post, but only if he should emerge as the unanimous choice of the Security

The Council is expected to meet in se-cret session early next month to decide on its recommendation for routine General Assembly approval.

So far, the names of Mr. Waldheim and Lui sEcheverri Alvarez, the outeoing President of Mexico, are before the Council. In his statement, reinforced by a personal telephone call to Mr. Wald-heim, the 63-year-old Mr. Amerasinghe specifically ruled out competing for votes and presented himself for coosideration only should the Countil be deadlocked between declared candidates.

'An Elegant Ploy'

A diplomat experienced in the delicate maneuvering that marks elections of the Secretary General interpreted this studied reluctance as "an elegant ploy" to gain consideration without risking the possibility of rejection.

For months, Mr. Waldheim has been the clear favorite to succeed himself; if the Council met today, diplomats believe he could secure 14 out of the. 15 votes. The one dissenter would probably be China, a permanent member whose negaive vote would count as a veto.

Though they have often spoken warmly of Mr. Waldheim's performance in office, hinese diplomats have never committed themselves to support his re-election. On the contrary, they have regularly said they would prefer a candidate from the third world.

Now there are two such contenderswen if not formally declared candidates —and their presence raises the question whether a European should hold the top post in an organization dominated by the known primarily as a leading champion the developing countries, a stand that has not endeared him to the United States and the other industrialized nations.

Mr. Amerasinghe, by contrast, has built up a long and impressive reputation as a parliamentary mediator. As permanent representative of Sri Lanka, formerly Ceylon, he bas served at the United Na tions for 10 years, and gained wide stat-ure as president and taskmaster of the inwieldy Law of the Sea Conference. Mr. Waldheim enjoys the more or less open support of four of the five permanent members of the Security Council— the United States, Soviet Union, Britain and France. He has won high regard for his five years in the delicate role of Secretary General.

He also has the public support of the Organization of African Unity, whose members seem ready to endorse bim for ing an African candidate for the office five years hence.

With this widely based support, many diolomats balieve it may have been a tactical error last month for Mr. Waldheim to have publicly announced his availability for re-election, instead of waiting to be approached by a nearly

Friendlier Relations With the Russians Rejected by Chinese

PEKING, Nov. 15 (Reuters)—China to-light flatly rejected any return to friendrelations with the Soviet Union follow-

The rejection came in a tough speech by Deputy Premier Li Hsien-nien that had earlier provoked a walkout by the Soviet Ambassador, Vasily S. The Soviet bloc ambassadors had earlier walked out of the banquet in protest at other remarks by Mr. Li.

Without mentioning the Soviet Union by name, the Deputy Premier referred numan rights violations in an to it as a "paper tiger" whose criminal ctions had aroused the condemnation of its verbal attacks on the Soviet Union.

A day after the message went to the Kremlin, Hsinhua, the Chinase press agency, denounced Moscow's claim that the Communist bloc was a voluntary

The agency said in a commentary that there were nearly one million Soviet froops in Eastern Europe, and added: "It cssentially a colonial empire with the Seviet Union as its sugerain state."

An editorial in Jenmin Jih Pao welcomng President Bokassa to China contained the customary attack on the Soviet ininn's Africa policy. It said that the fremlin had engaged in aggression, expansion and intrigue to sobotage the liberation movements of southern Africa.

At the same time, these officials are abeling the Arab moves as skillful propaganda maneuvers rather than as sincere and purposeful efforts to end the state of helligerency between Israel and its Arab neighbors.

At the risk of once again being labeled intransigent by the international community, Israel is sticking to its posture of making no major concessions regarding occupation of Arab territories for anything but solid guarantees of an end of the protracted state of war.

Hints of a Softening by P.L.O.

The most recent Arab move aimed at uniding up international support for its position, in the Israeli view, involves a roliferation of reports that the Palestine Liberation Organization has softened its anti-Israeli stand.

Some of these reports have come from prominent Israelis, who are, however, not in public office. Foreign Ministry officials lismiss the reports as nothing more than another propaganda move in the recent Arab effort to create a new climate that would favor them in the event of new negotiations on the Middle East.

The P.L.O. reports are parcel to an upsurge of reports which are part of preparing grounds for a political initiative vis-a-vis Israel," a Fnreign Ministry anayst said. Mr. Levesque is expected to begio negotiations with the federal Government in Ottawa for a gradual transfer of sovereignty to Quebec. He has promised that his government would make no unilateral move toward independence uotil a referendum was held and he had obtained a popular mandate to do so.

The prevailing opinion at the moment appears to be against independence, but the separatist victory today was expected to introduce a period of uncertainty into Quebec's political and economic life as with heavy proportions of English-speakwell as to cast greater doubt that at any ing or immigrant votes, found Mr. Boutime in the recent past on the future of the Canadian federation.

He had already courted unpopularity with the English majority in Canada with a policy of enforcing bilingualism as a way of getting uebec's French-speaking majority more weight within the Canalian federation.

The election in Quebec of a party hos-tile to this federation has deeply undercut Mr. Trudeau's policy and further weakened his own political position and that of the National Liberal Party. After six years in power, Mr. Bourassa,

Bourassa Viewed as Liability

He in effect asked voters to forget their grievances against the government in the interest of keeping Canada together. But Liberal candidates running in districts rassa such a liability to their chances that they publicly apologized for him and hinted broadly that his leadership would be contested within the party whatever the electoral result.

The Quebec Party, also aware that pub-lic opinion was against independence, played down this issue and concentrated its campaign on the Liberal record.

Mr. Levesque proposed better government and promised no unitateral move toward independence until the population had been consulted. However, the Quehec Party expects that in degotiations with the federal Government Ottawa will refuse at one point or another to yield on soch matters as power over defense, foreign affairs and currency, and that consequently the Quebec government will then have to call for a mandate to pursue inde-

The United States stand was attacked bitterly in the Council by a dozen supporters of Vietnam. It is expected that they will now ask the General Assembly to take up the matter with the idea of winning approval for a resolution asking the Council to reconsider the application.

The United Nations Charter requires the approval of the Security Council approval for any new membership.

The decision to press for a vote was made by the 11 countries, including France and Sweden, that had jointly sponsored the membership application. They were said to have decided to act speedily after Vietnamese representativs told their third-world supporters earlier in the day that they wanted a decision.

Backers of Vietnam have made it no secret that they regard the vote as e means of underscoring the isolation of the United States on the issue of Vietnamese membership in the United Nations. The United States stood alone in 1975 when it used its veto to block the admission of North Vietnam and South Vietnam. The two Vietnams were not formally unified until July of this year. When the Vietnamese request for admission came up again in September, the Ford Administration announced that the United States would continue to use its veto until there was an accounting given on the missing Americans.

At the time, the Vietnamese accused the United States of twisting the membership question into an election-campaign issue and of using the issue of the missing Americans for domestic political purposes.

However, shortly before the Council was to act—with the American veto a certainty—an agreement was reached to postpone the decision until after the November election.

The Vietnamese apparently acquiesced in the hope that their application would be approved once the election was out of the way. The Ford Administration continued to insist that no commitment had been made. Supreme Court Refuses to Review Ruling on Concorde Flights to U.S.

The Justices let stand a decision by the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Cofumbia that Secretary of Transportation William T. Coleman Jr. had acted within his authority in parmitting the Concerns to present on a trial ting the Concorde to operate on a trial basis at two airports in this country.

The authorities in Fairfax County, Va., and Nassau County, N.Y., seeking to stop the Concorde flights, had asked the high court to review the circumstances of Mr.

Coleman's decision. Last February, Mr. Colemen gave per-mission to British Airways and Air France to fly the Concorde, the world's fastest passenger plane, which crosses the Atlantic et twice the speed of sound, into Dulles International Amport in Virginia and John F. LISBON, Nov. 15 (UPI)-An explosion oday outside the home of former Agnipolice spokesman said.

Limited Concorde service has been available at Dulles since May 24, cutting by 3½ hours the flying time between Dulles and Europe.

In seeking a review by the Supreme Court, Fairfax and Nassau counties contended that Mr. Coleman permitted the supersonic transport flights before adopting noise regulations for the aircraft as ordered by Congress in the Noise Control Act of 1972. Concorde opponents also said that evidence suggested that Mr. Coleman's decision to permit the commercial flights had been influenced by pressure from the White House under President Nixon, a factor that was not discussed in Mr.Coleman's 61-page order.

In opposing the appeal, Government et-tomeys argued that Mr. Coleman was free to authorize the flights despite the lack of general noise standards. They also said that while certain evidence demon-strated that the Concorde flights were "an issue of political sensitivity," Mr. Coleman had not ected in bad faith.

This means that parole authorities may wait until the defendant serves his sentence for the second crime before they decide whether the commission of that crime merits revoking the original parola grant and whether the defendant must serve the remainder of his first sentence.

even if the defendant must wait as much as 10 years between the second crima and the hearing on whether that crime merits parole revocation.

Today's decision came in the case of an Apache Indian in Arizona who was convicted in 1962 of rape and sentenced to 10 years in prison. He was paroled in 1966 and, while on parole, he should and killed two other men. He pleaded guilty to one charge of manslaughter and one of second-degree murder, and received two concurrent 10-year sentences.

Prompt Hearing Sought The defendant wanted a prompt parole

The defendant wanted a prompt parole revocation hearing so that if parole authorities ruled he must serve any of his remaining sentence on the first offense, all sentences could run concurrently.

The Court's opinion was written by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger; the dissent, by Justice John Paul Stevens, joined by William T. Brennan Jr. The decision involved Federal procedures but presumainvolved Federal procedures but presuma-bly applies to state proceedings as well. The ruling comes four years after a major Supreme Court ruling on parole, and, in effect, adopts the narrower of possible interpretations of that earlier

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15—The Supreme have ruled as the high court did today—that ruled 7-2 today that a convict who is paroled before serving his full sentence and who is then convicted and imprisoned for a second crime, committed while on parole, has no constitutional right to an immediate parole revocation hearing.

Three other lower appeals courts, however, ruled that the Supreme Court decision in 1972 required immediate hearings in such cases. Two other lower courts took intermediate positions.

"If unlimited delay is permitted, the procedural safeguards which were fashioned in Morrisey to assure the parolee a fair opportunity to present facts in mitigation and to challenge the government's essertions will have become meaningless," they contended.

The dispute turns largely on the effect of the issuing of a parole violator warrant. Federal parole authorities, in cases involving imprisonment for crune committed while on parole, follow a practice of issuing a warrant and sending it to the prison where the parolee is serving his new sentence. They assue it as a kind of "detainer," so that the prison will hold the defendant rather than release him when he has finished his sentence, and do not "execute" it, by serving it on the do not "execute" it, by serving it on defendant himself.

Rhodesian Response to Kissinger Hinged on an Ambigui

By BERNARD GWERTZMAN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15—Crucial to acceptance by the Rhodesian Government of the American plan for black majority rule was receipt of an ambiguous message from Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger that suggested that black leaders had agreed to e Rhodesian proposal that would allow whites to retain the defense and police ministries in an interim government.

As a result of the message of Sept. 21
—shown recently to The New York Times—Prime Minister Ian D. Smith was able to muster his party's support for the five-point package plan he had earlier told Mr. Kissinger and Prime Minister John Vorster of South Africa was "my own suicide note."

The New York Times has speot several weeks looking into the issue of the white ministers. Because of the Rhodesian talks, under way in Geneva, oot every participant in the Kissinger negotiations has been willing to speak, even io confidence, hut several were willing for the sake of histories accurage to mark cardidly. historical accuracy to speak candidly.

What emerges is a complicated picture in which Mr. Kissinger, in what appears to have been his final major oegotiating mission, felt that an almost historic op-portunity had unexpectedly arisen to setthe the Rhodesian question through diplo-macy, and that to facilitate the process he chose to be ambiguous when candor might bave risked failure.

On Sept. 19, Mr. Kissinger had handed Mr. Smith the five-point plan and said he had to accept it or else face total he had to accept it or eise face total isolation in his guerrilla war. In eight hours of desperate bargaining, Mr. Smith persuaded Mr. Kissinger to seek black concurrence in a guarantee that the defense and police portfolios would remain white during the transitional period before an independent black Rhodesia was formed.

Without that guarantee, Mr. Smith told Mr. Kissinger and Mr. Vorster, he could not be sure be could "sell" the rest of Mr. Kissinger and Mr. Vorster, he could not be sure be could "sell" the rest of the Kissinger plan, including a call for majority rule in two years, a constitution to be worked out by an interim government of the state of the proposal of the ground that Mr. Smith would once again reject their proposals and subject them to ridicule from radical Africans. tion to be worked out by an interim gov-ernment and British legal sanction for Rhodesian independence.

Provisions for Whites Added

On Sept. 21, Mr. Kissinger sent a message to Mr. Smith from Dar es Salaam Tanzania, that on the basis of discussions with black leaders in Lusaka, Zambia, and Dar es Salaam, he believed the provisions for the white defense and police ministers "can be added" to the five

It was an ambiguously worded instrucin was an amoignously worded instruction io a longer message and did oot specifically say the black leaders had accepted the proposal, but it did leave that impression in both Pretoria and Salisbury.

Almost as soon as Mr. Smith made his speech on Sept. 24 and said the ministers of defense and police "would be white" it was decounced by black leaders. With the specific policy would be with the would almost inevitably have to confer with Mr. Smith.

In Dar es Salaam, Mr. Nyerere was the specific policy would be with the specific policy would be with the specific policy. It was decounced by black leaders. With not optimstic that Mr. Smith would agree the Rhodesian talks in Geneva floundering, the issue has remained controversial. In essence, the issue has come down to who has told the truth.

Mr. Smith has said he agreed to the five-point plan he made public because he had received assurances from Mr. Klssinger that the hlack leaders had ac-cepted the whole package, including Mr. Smith's additioos oo the white ministers. In his view, either the hlacks have reneged or Mr. Kissinger misled him.

Deny Approving Details of Plan The blacks, such as President Julius K. Nyerere of Tanzania, insist that they did not give their approval to the details of the five-point plan, only to the general thrust of majority rule in two years, leav-ing it to Britain to work out details later with black and white Rhodesians. They say they would have rejected the propos-al for white ministers. Mr. Kissinger and his aides have been

On Oct. 24, Mr. Kissinger said on televi-sion that, "I think everybody is telling the truth." Other Americans have said the black leaders raised no specific objections and so this was interpreted as ap-proving the five-point plan as read by Mr. Smith.

Central to Mr. Kissinger's diplomacy were his meetings with Mr. Smith in Pretoria, South Africa, on Sunday, Sept. 19 and the cable traffic from Mr. Kissinger to Mr. Smith oo Sept. 21. After months of intense diplomatic ef-

After months of intense diplomatic efforts in collaboration with Britain. Mr. Kissinger had succeeded, with the aid of Mr. Vorster, in getting Mr. Smith to the point where he was under considerable pressure to accept the principle of black majority rule in two years or face economic and possibly military disaster from the expanding guerrilla war against his minority regime.

Originally, Mr. Kissinger had hoped that the black "front-line" Presidents, those

Mr. Kissinger met with Mr. Vorster in Zurich from Sept. 4 to 6 and they agreed on some proposals—cleared with the hlacks—that Mr. Vorster would ask Mr. Smith to accept publicly. In Zurich, Mr. Vorster for the first time urged Mr. Kissinger to meet himself with Mr. Smith to insure success

That evening, at Mr. Vorster's home, Mr. Kissinger was again urged to see Mr. Smith. The South Africans said that Mr. Smith would not be able to tell his "hard-liners" in Salisbury that the days of white minority rule were doomed unless he could inform them that he had been persuaded by the Americans and not just by the South Africans, whose motives of self-preservation were suspect to the Rhodesians.

On Saturday evening, Sept. 18, Mr. Vorster told Mr. Kissinger that if he saw Mr. Smith the next day there was a "reasonable" chance that the Rhodesian would agree to the proposals being talked

On Sunday morning, at 9:30, Mr. Kissinger and Mr. Smith met at the home of the American Ambassador, William G. Bowdler, accompanied by their aides Before the meeting, a Kissinger aide, Lawrence S. That evening, the Americans and Rho-desians gathered at the botel of Mr. Vorster for the climactic talks.

Mr. Kissinger handed Mr. Smith a typed list of five points that he said must be the basis for a Rhodesian settlement. In addition, he gave him a memo on the economic trust that would be created by outside powers to help Rhodesia economically and to guarantee the property rights of whites, encouraging them to stay but giving them compensation if they left. He asked Mr. Smith to agree to the plan and make his acceptance that night to the reporters then sitting on the grass outside the house in the darkness. Groh Is Indicted on Bribery Charge; $10,000 Political Payoff Alleged

By SELWYN RAAB

Robert T. Groh, a former Sanitation Commissioner and former Deputy Borough President of Queens, has been indicted on hribery and grand-larceny charges in connnection with an alleged $10,000 political payoff in Queens for a motel zoning change.

The indictments, which are expected to be announced today, were voted last week by a grand jury that heard evidence presented by the office of John F. Keenan, the special state prosecutor for corruption cases.

Mr. Keenan declined to comment, hut Mr. Groh's lawyer, Marvin B. Segal, confirmed yesterday that Mr. Groh would be arraigned today on the charges. Mr. Segal said Mr. Groh would plead not guilty. He also said that Mr. Groh, who was elected as a Civil Court judge this month, would postpone taking the post until the eccusatione were disposed of.

Background of the Case

The indictments assert that Mr. Grob while Deputy Borough President in 1972 suggested that a law firm representing the Sheraton Corporation contribole $20,000 to a Democratic fund-raising dinner. The alleged payments were paid to to he well connected with Demototal $10,700 and were allegedly passed crats in the city. Mr. Fitzgerald, who has since heen indicted on an unrelated perjury charge, leter changed his story and told investigators that the zoning-change money in-volved the former Manhettan lew firm of Buckley, Kisseloff & Lohell.

One member of the now-dissolved lew firm, Samuel J. Risseloff, hes testified hefore the grand jury. He is said to have told the jury that he met with Mr. Groh on Feh. 25 and April 26, 1972, in Mr. Groh'e office and that Mr. Groh proposed

The Sheraton Corporation won approv al from the Board of Estimate for the zoning change on July 20, 1972, but it later dropped the expansion project and sold the inn.

Mr. Groh's lawyer, Mr. Segal, said that Mr. Groh was independently wealthy and that there was no hint "that he personally took any money."

The former detective for the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, Walter Sheppard, was on the stand describing how he had searched a black bag that Dr. Friegood was carrying at Rennedy Airport on June 25, 1975. HAUPPAUGE, L.L., Nov. 15—The Suffolk County Legislature, edding $1.7 million to the budget of the County Executive, John V. N. Klein, adopted today a $578 million budget for 1977.

The new budget will result in a property tax rate of about $3.06 per $1.00 of assessed valuation—an increase for homeowners of as much as 79 cents over last year. The county tax accounts for about only 10 perceot of the total tax bill for residents, with the remainder consisting of school, town and apecial district taxes.

JUST HOW MUCH HOSPITAL DOES THIS CITY NEED?

We may have 4,500 unneeded hospital beds now. And there are more a-building.

We at Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Greater New York believe many of these new beds are unnecessary.

And some new technical facilities being installed may be redundant.

We think that new facilities should be planned. And present duplication should be eliminated...whether in New York City or any other county in our downstate area.

We want everyone to get care—quality care—when it's needed.

As long as there's costly duplication, it can put strains on the quality of care, by spreading it too thin.

We believe in eliminating surplus hospital beds. We have argued in favor of this for years. We're happy to see it happening now.

After all, an empty bed costs about 70% as much to maintain as one that's occupied, and it tends to encourage unnecessary treatment.

We have spoken longer and more strongly than any other organization in New York State in our effort to control present surpluses and avoid future ones.

But much more must be done, and it requires public support. We are asking that you be informed, involved, and hopefully, support our efforts and those of others to correct the situation.

Sophisticated facilities: more can be less. We've seen a trend toward proliferation of facilities for open-heart surgery and kidney fransplants. We've worked to control that proliferation. Certainly, we want to save and prolong lives. But again, let's emphasize quality. These delicate operations are best concentrated in units with the most experience: an under-used facility may deliver care of lesser quality at higher cost.

"CAT's" that cost $400,000 to $700,000. Ever hear of the CAT Scanner? (CAT=: computerized axial tomography.)

It's a complex new device that can scan the brain or whole body with x-rays, then produce a computerized picture for doctors and CAT specialists to analyze.

It's a super x-ray.

It can detect certain trouble spots with remarkable clarity and efficiency. It may be the greatest new diagnostic tool in years.

On the other hand, some of its analyses can be done as effectively with existing equipment. And its cost is enormous.

We're worried that too many physicians and facilities in the city are going to run out and buy one.

We've requested stronger legislation to deter that proliferation: Governor Carey has supported the urgent need for such a law. Again. carefully controlled installations may deliver higher quality at less cost than if they are permitted to simply proliferate.

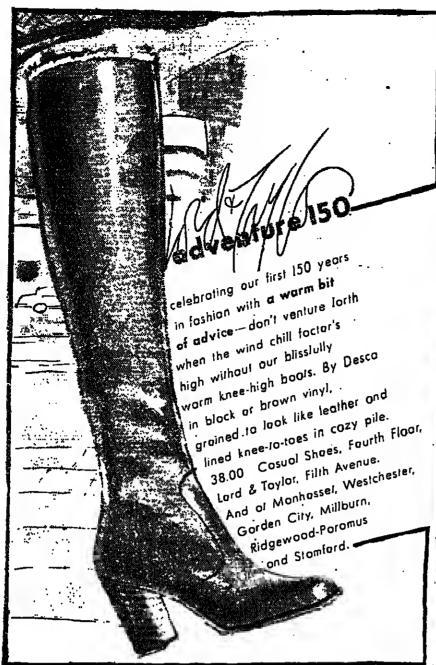

Who's paying? You. Remember this. You pay the health care bill. Whether in direct charges, taxes, or the cost of your health care plan.

That's why we need your interest and support. We don't think you can afford to be indifferent.

We believe there's more to good health than just paying bills.

Transcript of a News Conference Held by President-Elect Carter in Ger

Following is a transcript of President-elect Jimmy Carter's news conference yesterday afternoon in Plains, Ga., as recorded by The New York Times through the facilities of ABC News. Because some questions were partly inaudible, they have been paraphrased in the transcript by The Times and The Associated Press.

OPENING STATEMENT

I'm glad to have you all here. I noticed the number of cars outside was two or three times larger than my total audience was a couple of years ago.

The first indication of the character of the next Administration will be the quality of top officials who are chosen to serve with me and Senator Mondale. This will obviously be one of the most important tasks for us prior to the inauguration. I would like to outline for you today in geoeral terms the process that we are using to select meo and women for top positions in the next Administration. The process will be similar to the one that I used in choosing Senator Mondale as the Vice-Presidential nominee.

Although I'm eager to ideotify and to reveal to the public my designees in these major positions as early as possible, I'm also much more concerned with assuring that the process be thorough enough to insure that the hest person in the country is 'chosen for each position. So we will be careful and thorough and deliberate in making these major decisions.

I've asked Senator Mondale to work closely with me io the entire process. I will ask for his recommendations in filling each position and I will also coosult with him as we evaluate persoos who are recommended for these positions.

A list of people who should he conaidered for each position is already heing developed; some of them are already ohvious to me from those I've known in the campaigo and before, but there will be an intensive search to insure that throughout the country I have available to me recommendations of those that I might not have known in the past. I solicit these recommendations from all interested citizens.

In addition, though, Senator Mondale and I have already begun to call and to coosult with distinguished Americans to seek their advice and suggestions on those who should be considered for these major posts. This consultation process will continue until all appointees are chosen.

Some Names This Week

Later this week I will anounce to the press the names of some of those who are belping us to ideotify and evaluate persons who should be considered for these positions. Members of this group will fuoction as individuals, not as a hody, providing us directly with their own thoughts and suggestions. Some of those who will be consulting with me io a very exteosive way prefer that their names not be revealed other than giving me permission to reveal their names as part uf the process.

In order to assure maximum personal knowledge of the qualifications and compatibility of persons with whom I'm not familiar, they will be asked to join with me and with Senator Mondale and with my staff in evaluating projects or proposed legislation that will be important as an elemental portion of the next Administration. We will evaluate information that is presented to us and we'll compare it with our own personal assessments of the persons being considered.

I will persooslly interview the selections for the major posts and Senator Mondale will help me in that process. The press and the American people will, of course, know the Identity of those with whom I meet, hut you probably will not always know for what position they are being considered.

After proper consultation with Congressional leaders and after security checks have heen completed and reviewed by me, I will then make my decisions known to the American people. In each instance, the security check will not be conducted without the permission of that person being investigat-

I'm sure that you realize that there will be inevitable speculation about who I am considering and who I will select. But just as in the Vice-Presidential selection process, no one on my staff, no one in my family is authorized to speak on my behalf about possible appointees during this discussion period. I have not made a decision up until this point about any of these appointees. When I make my fioal decision then I will make a public announcement, Aod once that decision has been made I will make the announcement as expeditiously as possible.

As some of you learned while I was choosing a Vice-Presidential running mate, often those who talk the most know the least.

Senator Mondale will be assisting me, staying mostly in Washington although he will be coming down tomorrow night to work with me on this process. He'll be meeting with Congressional leaders on Wednesday and he will be with me on Friday for a C.I.A. hriefing and throughout this whole interim period. Although his normal base of operations will be in Washington, he and I will be together often.

The staff work for this process will be coordinated by Hamilton Jordan, who will be located in Washington.

I'll be glad to answer questions about this or any other items.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS 1. Getting More John

Q. Governor, eight million Americans are out of work. You said during the campaign that your No. I priority was getting people back to work. Can you be specific now about what you're going to do about it. And further, whether you can do this without new inflation?

A. Well, I can't be more specific now than I was in the campaign. I have been meeting with snd talking with people since the election to put into more concrete terms my own proposals for the next Administration.

On Wednesday, I will be meeting with about a dozen of the top Democratic Congressional leaders from both houses, leaders who have been chosen by the Speaker of the House and hy the majority leader in the Senate.

I've been making arrangements this morning to meet with distinguished husiness leaders. My intention is to go to Washingtoo next week to spend a couple of days meeting with Mr. Arthur Burns and with members of the present Cabinet and with others. But I think until I have a clearer concept about legislation to be proposed and the priority of proposals to be made that don't require legislation, it would be inappropriate for me to make interim sonouncements.

I understand that President Ford himself—and I did not get this information from him—will wait until possibly the first or second week in December, until economic indicators are available to him, before be makes a statement about the economy. But I'm not qualified at this point to present any definitive solution to the unemployment question.

As far as the inflationary aspect of efforts made to reduce unemployment, I think that this is one that I've covered before. We have now approximately 70 percent of our industrial capacity being used; which means that 30 perceot or so is not being used. With eight million people unemployed, that's another tremendous untapped reservoir of workers and capacity that can be tapped hefore you have pressures of an inflatiooary type.

In addition to that, by targeting specific programs in a counter-cyclical fashion in communities or among groups who have the highest unemployment, the aspect of inflation that derives from employment efforts could he minimized. We believe that we can get the unemployment rate down over a fairly long period of time—two, three or perhaps four years—to the 4 to 4½ percent figure before excessive inflation pressures will he felt.

But I will reveal my plans as they are evolved. They are not final enough now to discuss further.

2. Tax Cut Possibility

Q. Could you get a tax cut through Congress in light of reservations expressed by Arthur Burns, by Chalrman Reuss of the Banking Committee and hy Chairman Ullman of House Ways and Means Committee, and would you he sttempting or have you decided to call for a tax cut in terms of a permanent tax reduction or a one-time tax rebate?

A. Again, I can't make a Judgment on that uotil I see what the economic circumstances are at the end of the next two months, but we will be evolving alternative plans; some will prohably involve the possibility of a tax reduction—that's not a final decision yet—and then, depending upon which aspect of the economy needs the greatest stimulation, or exactly which taxpayers should be benefitted and whether it should he a one-shot tax rehate or a continued process—that would slso he decided in the future. I can't give that

3. Contact With Arthur Burns Q. What do you want to discuss with these husinessmen and what do you want to discuss with Arthur Burns?

A. I've had communications from Mr. Burns, who pledges cooperation with me during the next Administration. I understand the autonomy of the Federal Reserve System and would not like to eliminate that autonomy. I would like to get it first-hand, a report from Mr. Burns about his prospects for next year, the amount of, the rate of increase of money availability for the next 12 months. I would like for him to repeat to me the appropriate parts of his testimony recently given to Senator Proxmire.

And, I've never met Mr. Burns; I would like very much for me and him to have a chance to discuss our relative attitudes toward the economy during my Administration. I think that we will find a substantial degree of compatibility. I have a great admiration for him. I think he's highly professional, I think in every instance, so far as I know, he's acted in what he thought was the best interest of our country, and we will discuss, I think, at length, the economic circumstances. And I can seem to detect the degree of compatability and the degrees of differences.

If there are differences, then I would have to decide what to do about increase in the supply of money. This can be done, as you know, through tax rebates which would require the cooperation and action of Congress, or in the preparation of my own hudget that I will present to Congress as an amendment to the ooe that President Ford Is oow proposing. But there are three instances in our economic structure relatively independent one from another: the President, the Congress and the Federal Reserve which is, each one of which has to be involved in overall economic decisions. They can't act independently.

As far as the business leaders are concerned, I will be asking them for their advice on Cabinet appointees. I will also he asking them for their constant input into the next Administration on economic matters, their cooperation in the evolution and consummation of informant legislation. I'd like to have their advice on tax matters and I will, of course, be consulting with lahor leaders and others along with the business leaders.

4. Meeting With Businessmen

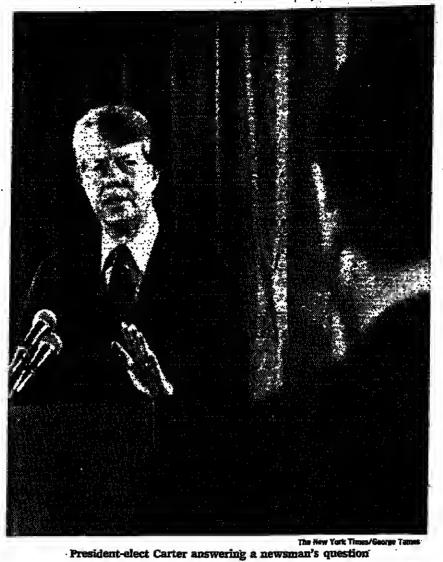

O. Can you tell us any of the people you will meet with?

A. I will be having a meeting tonight st my home with one of the Georgia businessmen who is helping to put together the meeting. One of them who has contacted me is the chairman of the board of Coca-Cola Company and I will be meeting tonight with Burt Lance. Paul Austin is the chairman of the Coca-Cola board. But I've had invitations from others, particularly in New York, to give them a chance to meet with me—a group of busicess leaders—and I would like to hooor that request along with the requests of other groups in the country who have cted me. 5. The Future of Burns

Q. Would you anticipate, sir, in your meeting with Mr. Burns, making any suggestion of aoy kind that he step aside as chairman so that you can bring in your chairman?

A. I thick that decision on my part could best be made after I meet with Mr. Burns. He's announced that he's not going to step down and my first inclination, of course, would be to work with bim harmoniously and to let him stay on se chairmao. I have said in the past that I prefer to have the chairmanship of the Federal Reserve Board legislation to that degree. But I would guess that I can work well with Mr. Burns if he should stay on as chairman, which I think is the most likely proscoterminus with the term of the President: I still feel that way and will seek

6. Postponement of Reforms

Q. Is the economic situation so critical from what you can tell so far that you might perhaps want to sidetrack or postpooe your major reform proposals in the tax area and the bureaucracy? A. No. Q.—to coocentrate on whatever to belp the economy?

A. No. I don't see any incompatibility among them. I think one of the reasons that our Government has been ineffective in dealing with unemployment and with inflation and with an absence of proper delivery of services to the welfare, health and other areas—transportation, eoergy—is because of the bloated and uncontollable bureaucracy.

And I intend to pursue aggressively the premises that I have made to the American people. One of the subjects of discussion on Wednesday with the Democratic Coogressional leaders will be the complete reorganization of the executive hranch of Government.

I've already had assurances given to me by some of the Republican leaders. I noticed Congressman Anderson on the television this morning said that that would be one area where he felt that we would have unanimous support from Republican members of Congress.

But in welfare reform in the reform

But In welfare reform, in tax reform, in comprehensive health care—I would not defer those because of the problem with unemployment and inflation. I think they're interrelated. And even if they were not, I think that I would have a broad-based enough opportunity as President to deal with them simultaneously.

7. Atoms and Human Rights
Q. What do you intend to do in the area of nuclear agreements and buman

A. Yes, I think that my statements on those matters have been fairly well spelled out in several speeches I've made that were given careful consideration by me. Particularly in the reduction of atomic weapons, the control of nuclear waste materials and the nonproliferation of the capability for atomic explosions.

I will pursue through normal diplomatic channels and through normal diplomatic persuasion my hope that the sale of plutonium reprocessing plants hy both Germany and France might be ahrogated and oot be carried to conclusioo. The information that I have, which is unofficial and has been made public, is that in at least one of those instances there is a good chance that this might be successful.

As far as the human rights issue is coocerned, this is an all-pervasive problem throughout the world. It does apply in some instances, for iostance, to Chile, to which you did refer. I think here again the attitude of our nation's people and our Government toward another foreign government like Chile's would be very seriously affected by an absence of concern for human rights.

At the present time—in this past year
—my understanding is that we've given to Chile, for instance, more than 80 percent of the total Food for Peace

Southern Hemisphere—in Central and South America. And I think about the same amount in bousing construction funds.

So I think the allocation of foreign aid and the normal friendship of our country would be determined or affected certainly by the attitude of those countries toward human rights.

8. Dealing With Soviet Union Q. What are the plana your Administration has for dealing with the Soviet Union.

A. Well, I want to remind you again of a statement that I made at the last press conference: I'm oot President. We have a Government in place that's perfectly capable of representing our nation and I don't want any of my responses to insinuate that I'm trying to act as President or that my representatives are representing the American Government.

The Soviet Unioo, I think, is the key to the reduction of atomic weaponry, and I have read very carefully the recent speeches made by Mr. Brezhnev and the statement that was submitted to the United Nations by Mr. Gromyko concerning reduction in dependence, for instance, upon atomic weapons. When I become President then I will pursue those possibilities for the lessening of dependence on atomic weapons aggressively.

As far as the buman rights issue and the consummation of the Helsinki agreement concerning human rights, that would be an ever-present consideration in my mind as I deal with the Soviet Union in matters of trade and matters of world peace. But I can't describe to you specifically yet what I shall do. I don't want to mislead anyone into thinking that I have automatic answers or that I am authorized or am ioclined at this point to try to act as though I'm already in office.

9. Selecting Key Aides

Q. Governor, you earlier described the process of picking your Cabinet members, and I assume that also applies to some of your own White House aides? It sounds like a very open process. A. It will be.

Q. What happens when you have these people in and we know about it and you've talked with them and you reject them? Isn't that going to cause you some political problems?

A. No. Well, I think maybe some political problems but I believe that if you have become familiar with the procedure used in the selection of my Vice-Presidential running mate, although there may have been some political problems I think they were very rapidly bealed. I don't know of any aftermath of ill feeling on the part of the five or six other persons who were publicly considered for Vice President who were not chosen.

And I think the same thing would apply in this instance. If I should consider eight or I0 people for Secretary of Defense and Secretary of State and I can oly choose one for each of those positions, there would be deputy and assistant secretaryships available if they would prefer them, or perbaps if someone is highly qualified they might be willing to serve as Amhassador to Great Britain or to Russia.

I should think the process ought to be as fair as I described it. I thought about this a great deal and I tried to use my own experience in choosing a Vice-Presidential running mate as a basis for this process. There will be about, I would say, 75 persons whom I would choose personally in the Government. I can see clusters of appointments that are closely interrelated—State, Defense, Treasury, Commerce, perhaps even Agriculture in foreign economics, for instance—and obviously if I choose some one who has a particular capability as the secretary of a department, then the under secretary might very well supplement that top person's capabilities.

I think that this process ought to be a very slow and very careful and very methodical one and when I make a decision I will not delay in making the announcement. But I don't anticipate having to harry through it. There will be at least ooe or two key positions that I will fill very quickly. As far as the White House staff is concerned, I've only made one final decision, and Jody Powell will be my press secretary in the next Administration. I wanted to get this announcement done early hecause I felt that if we delayed it further it might take away from the importance of the appointment of Secretary of State or Secretary of Defense.

And also I might say one other thing: Jody will be authorized to speak for me to the press and particularly in a formal setting. I think that you ail know that in an informal interchange at certain times of the day or at night or in the corridors of motels that may not be the case, but I think Jody needs your help and your assistance and your advice. I've been very pleased with Jody's services as press secretary during the campaign, and while I was also Governor before, and have complete confidence in him.

And when he speaks to you at a , briefing, then you can take it for granted that he speaks for me when he says he does.

10. U.S. Embassy in Jerusalem

Q. On Page 56 of the Democratic platform there is a statement, "The U.S. Embassy should be moved from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem." How long after you become President would you fulfill this contract and move the embassy from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem?

from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem?

A. I have never said that I would fulfill that contract. When the Democratic convention was over, on several occasions I used that as ooe example of a part of the Democratic platform with which I did not agree. And I bave said many times—several times, not many—in public that I would reserve that decision until after I become President. But I understand that it is in the Democratic platform, but there are several instances in the platform of commitments that I don't share. I may or may not want to move the embassy to Jerusalem, but I'm not committed to do that at this point.

11. Limitation of Arms

Q. I wonder if what they're [current administration officials] doing [in relation to the SALT talks] this year leaves time to do anything short of get atarted in this field so that the time should be spent now on getting some negotiating assurance working during the transition, and how much of that whole problem concerns you?

A. I think if my own Administration could accomplish a substantial reduction in dependence upon atomic weapons as an instrument for international relations, it would be a major one. I consider this to be very important. As you probably know, Tve made at least three major speeches on the subject of atomic weaponry.

I've stayed as thoroughly familiar with the SALT talks or details as I could within the propriety of being a candidate and now a President-elect. I will have another briefing by the C.I.A.—Senator Mondale and I here—on this Friday.

I met with Dean Rusk about three or four hours on Saturday. He has been an official member of the special committee to assess disarmament. The meeting with Secretary Rissinger that Senator Mondale and I will have will be announced shortly at the time for it. That will be one of the major items that I shall discuss with him.

Obviously, I have no objections to a determined effort being continued by the present Administration for a SALT agreement. And I bope that is ongoing. But to the limit of my ability to understand both the details and the general principles involved, I will become familiar with it.

I would bope that we can be successful. My commitments have been spelled out very thoroughly. I think we ought to freeze at the present level the number of missiles, the number of warheads, overall throw weights and qualitative status and I bave said this in two major speeches which I'm sure have been reported to the Soviet leaders.

I think if you have a particular interest in it you might read a speech that Mr. Brezhnev has made and a statement that has been filed with the United Nations by Mr. Gromyko.

They have had sent to me a copy of those two statements. I think they are encouraging. I have no way to know. I've never met with the Russian Ambassador nor any of the Russian leaders. I've deliberately avoided meeting with foreign countries, But I will put that as a top item on my agenda when I become President. I'll try to be qualified on Inauguration Day.

12. Decisions of Kissinger
Q. If I could follow up, I understand that you would have no objections to the present Administration continuing work on a new SALT agreement. A.

Yes, and hope that they will.

Q. Secretary Kissinger was, is, the key figure in negotiating this kind of agreement. Are you prepared to accept whatever kinds of negotiation process that Secretary Kissinger wants to continue with? A Nor necessarily tinue with? A. Not necessarily.

Q. Not necessarily. What then do you mean, then, when you say that you would like them to keep on? There's a general feeling that Kissinger, really can't do very much with the new President being elected from the opposite party.

A. During the campaign I was quite often very critical of the Administration because they were not pursuing the SALT talks aggressively. Following the campaign I think it's fruitless for me to be critical any further. It's of no benefit to the nation to point ont the absence of progress in the last two years since the Vladivostok agreement was reached. This has not heen confirmed, as you know; it's just a simple unconfirmed agreement based on further negotiations.

I would hope that we can reach, by next fall, when SALT I expires, a comprehensive agreement on nuclear disarmament. If we cannot, then I would he very likely to ask for sn extension of the present agreement. But I have hopes that this can be done, but when I mention my hope that the, about the continuation of the negotiations, I think whatever minor progress is made is a step in the right direction. But hefore a final agreement is reached, of course any negotiating points on which there has been agreement would he subject to renegotiations.

13. Wage and Price Controls

Q. Your campaign statement indicating interest in some form of voluntary wage and price guidelines has created a great deal of consternation among small business. Can we rule out a return to wage and price controls?

A. Well, I would not want to go further than my campaign statement which I intend to honor, and that is to seek from the business community and from the labor community voluntary commitments on a joint basis to try to hold down inflationary pressures, and using existing mechanisms for discussion, I would proceed on that basis. I think if they could he moderately successful along with the so-called jawboning authorities that the President can exercise, that would be the hest way to avoid any mandatory price and wage controls and I would certainly like to adhere to my policy of avoiding any mandatory controls.

I can't rule out any opportunity of that kind becanae I can't predict what sort of disastrons circumstance we might face in the future. I would guess though that under normal circumstances, barring some national calamity, that we could avoid mandatory price and wage controls. And I don't snticipate any calamities.

14. Bombers and Missiles

Q. When you talk about stabilizing the quantity during SALT negotiations, does that mean you would favor operating solely on such weapons as the cruise missile, and also, could you tell us your view of Senator Ribicoff's proposal that Secretary Kissinger continue as a negotiator?

One holds that the trend reflects only the reason was that they did not like the changing nature of the electorate, the growing mobility of Americans and the decline in strong identification with one either candidate. decline in strong identification with one political party or the other. Eighteen-year-olds were enfranchised for the first time four years ago, and the newly enfranchised, whether the young, the female or the black, have historically lagged in votiog.

Some students of political behavior say that the greater mystery is not why people do not vote but why they do, given the fact that it is usually hard to see the impact of one vote; that voting takes time and effort and is likely to get one votiog.

The other maintains that something deeper and more alarming is at work that alienation and cynicism bave swelled the ranks of nonvoters, adding many who would normally have voted in previous years. A recent study by the Committee for the Study of the American Electorate concluded that this was the case, but the survey loterviewed nonvoters only, mak-

For example, asked whether government serves the "big interests" or "all the people." nonvoters said big interests by a 59-37 margin. Voters agreed, 58-37.

However, the survey snggests strongly that there is an important distinction between distrust of the system and a feeling among some citizens that they are not part of it. This distinction between active alienation and a more passive sense of powerlessness, confirms previous political

In addition, the results were weighted by factors related to voter turnout, since respondents in a survey of this type are often reluctant to acknowledge that they failed to vote.

don't reach the inevitable inflationary pressures until you get the unemploy-ment rate down to 5½ percent or less. At that point, you start making trade-offs between unemployment reduction and inflation. I'm not an economist hut the reason for that is if you start using industrial capacity that might he mar-ginal and efficiency, you start employ-ing people whose efficiency is not as as those who are in the normal work force. But because we have such a great unused industrial capacity—now almost 30 percent—and such a greatly unused manpower capacity - about eight million Americans—that gives a great reservoir of improvement before inflationary pressures inevitably build up. The point that I'd like to make is this: By targeting unemployment programs among constituent groups or in geographical areas where the unemployment rate is very high, not having a uniform effort nationwide, you can delay the impact of inflation on an average basis by concentrating in those high unemployment areas.

And some economists have estimated that you could reduce the unemployment rate at least a half percent or perhaps even more by targeting unemployment programs before the inflationary pressures build up. I believe that answers several questions.

Q. Is this what you had in mind during the campaign, or have things changed? A. No, I think this is exactly compatible with what I said during the campaigu.

20. Meeting With Ford

Q. Will you meet with President Ford soon, Governor? A. My plans are to meet with President Ford when he invites me. I understand that the likely time is the latter part of this month, which would be about the last week in the month. And I hope to meet with Secretary Kissinger before then, and I'll meet with the C.I.A. on Friday. I'll go to Washington next week for at least two days—the days are yet to be determined.

Q. Is that when you'll meet with Kissinger, next week? A. Those schedule arrangements have not yet been made, but that's my plan,

Increase Is Believed Likely

In fact, most oil experts believe that the oil-exporting nations are almost cer-tain to approve an increase of 10 percent or more at the Dec. 15 meeting in Qatar on the Persian Gulf. With this in mind, Mr. Carter was careful to avoid making any threats. He said:

"My own hope is that the OPEC nations will not increase the price of oil. That's expressed as an individual who has no responsibility in the government. Disturbed by Relationships

In addition, committee members were disturbed by suggestions of cooperative relationships between defense officials and Rockwell International, which looks upon the Condor missile as its entry back into the missile husiness.

The Democratic majority of the Joint Congressional Committee on Defense Production recently found substantial evidence that Dr. Malcolm R. Currie, director of defense research and engineering, cooperated unduly with Rockwell in sup-porting the Condor program against Pentagon and Congressional critics.

The House Appropriations Committee mentioned in its report how it had "terminated" the Condor program. And since' various families in both countries' come from one origin, it is sig-nilicant that one finds members of one family belonging to different; religions (Islam and Christianity) as we see in the Shihabi's, Yezbek's, Shatila's, etc. It is also very com

It is mainly for this reason that Syria came to the aid of Christians during the 1860 religious strile, subsequently giving tefuge to many of them, especially American and Anglican missionaries. This is still remembered by many people, as is the fact that Kamal lumblat's grandlather was behind the enfire

Furthermore, if is only too clear that the security of each of the two of the other. Yef Syria, because of these special circumstances, put up with the backward and chaotic sit ualion in Lebanon without Intersion to what is known as of the danger that that situation posed. In fact Syria was always and the wall of the danger that that situation posed. In fact Syria was always supplying Lebanon with its basic needs of foodstuffs and labor, and giving it commercial support, because the Lebanese economy was never self-supporting and did not have the minimum require-ments of self-sufficiency. At the beginning of the present crists the Lebanese called for the modernization of their backward system, and Syria hoped that they could develop their socially, politically, and economically corrupt system (that was more like a seven-system (thaf was more nike a seven-teenth-century administration) fo a twentieth-century system. Syria was prepared to offer anything to belp achieve this goal, but the feuding parties kept contradicting and changing their positions. But the increased fighting and violence and the formallon of a military government in the middle military government in the middle of 1975 brought about Syrian efforts for reconciliation. Syria therefore sent a delegation to Lebanon which was able to bring Lebanon which was able to bring about a cease-lire and help form a new government replacing fhe military regime in July 1975. This was lollowed by the appointment of a "National Dialogue" Committee whose duty was to set new foundations for the political, econ-omic and social life based on the national unity of the Lebanese External as well as internal factors, however, exercised tremendous pressure and planted paid mercenaries among the ranks of the fighting parties to paralyze the efforts of the National Dialogue Committee. This, and the failure of some Lebanese quarters to recog-nize the nature of the conspiracy, reignited the luse of lighting and sniping, thus increasing the calls; lor resumed Syrian efforts which became the only hope for an end to the tragedy. to the tragedy.

At the peak of a violent flare-up during the beginning of this year, and as a result of concentrated negotiations with all parties, a Sysian delegation went to Lebanon to work towards the following goals: bringing the fighting to an end, supervising the process of a peaceful settlement, undertaking efforts for mational conciliation, efforts for rational concination, forming a new national unity, government, and enforcing the Lebanese-PalesUnian agreements.

In consultation with the former lebanese President, Suleiman, Franjieh, an agreement was j reached to end the fighting as of January 22, 1976. A higher military committee consisting of Synans, Lebanese and Palestinians was febanese are the consention. Lebanese and Palestinians was formed to supervise the cease-life and the return to normalcy. On February 7th, President Francieh visited Damascus where a final agreement was reached for a political settlement which had been accepted by all parties. President Francieh subsequently announced the agreement, as "The Constitutional Paper", on Radio Lebanon. Thus a common denominator was lound for the lormation of a cassinet.

Syna welcomed every effort to end the tragic events, for the primary concern of all Syrians is the primary concern of all synans is the alleviation of the tragedy and bloodshed. For Syria, every Lebanese citizen, Moslem or Chrisfian, is sacred because he is a member of the Arab nation and the human community. President Assad said on this point: "What is taking place in Lebanon is an Arab internal allair, and the Arabs alone have the right and the Arabs alone have the right and responsibility to handle the sif-uation. The only factor which has in the past and will in the future decide the extent of Syria's involvement as well as the number and positions of Syrian troops is the interest of the Lebanese people because we share the same history, future and destiny."

future and destiny."
In addition to these lactors, the Lebanese crisis created for Syria a new problem: As a result of the fighting about one million persons moved to Syria, that is close to one immigrant for every twenty Syrians. We should recall here that the immigration to India of one Bengali for every sixty Indians resulted in the 1971 Indian-Pakistanl.War. It is only natural that Syria should try to the 1971 Indian-Pakistani War. It is only natural that Syria should try to stop the bloodshed and arrest the progress of the conspiracy.

Syria has taken this stand based on principles and convictions; it was the other parties who have shifted positions. Syria has adhered to its principles and has based its relationships with the other parties according to their attitudes to these principles. Syria's conduct is governed by the Arab traditional ethics and the Lebanese-Palestinian interests.

from the outset, Syria defined four aims for its political brotherly intulative in Lebanon. They are:

 Bringing the fighting to an end because this foils the conspiracy against Lebanon, the Palestinians and the Arab nation.

Preventing the partitioning of Lebanon regardless of the efforts and sacrifices this takes.

Pretecting the Palestinian Residues Management from the sistance Movement from the danger it is exposed to in Lebanon and sparing it the in-volvement in Lebanese affairs. Aiding the Lebanese brethren develop thier system political-ly, economically and socially through a process of demo-cratic dialogue and away from human massacres.

For these reasons the Lebanese people looked to Syria for help against bloodshed and displacement. And Syria came to the rescue, especially when asked by the legitimate Lebanese authori-ties, including the President, Premier, Speaker of the Parliament, and members of Parliament, all of whom were aware of the dangers ol partition. (The Syrian military presence in Lebanon is at the disposal of these legitimate authorities and their desire to secure Lebanon's integrity and stability. This has been emphasized by President Illas Sarkis who visited Damascus a number of times and conducted their constructive dis-

Observers and newsmen from all over the world have witnessed the calm and security which prevailed where Syrian forces have gone in, and the relief expressed by the Lebanese residents of these areas. What is more tragic about the Lebanese dilemma is that the Palestinians have been dragged into it, and have been involved in Lebanon's internal affairs. This in itself constitutes a plot against fheir cause. As a result, agreements were reached with Yasser 'Arafal Io achieve a cease-fire roore than once; the last and most significant April, but this time also the agreement was broken, and foreign pressures and mercenaries kept the war going, forcing Syna to take steps to protect the lives of all brothers.

lusf as in the case of Lebanon, the struggle for the sake of Pales-tine has been part of Syria's destiny and of its national security. For this struggle Syria has made many sac-rifices in manpower and appropria-tions, both of which are badly needed in this stage of Syria's economic development. Following the 1970 Corrective Movement led by President Halez Al-Assad, Syria made great efforts to reach a peaceful settlement in the area. Syria's efforts and fiexible attitude were acknowledged by the U.S. Secretary of State Dr. Henry Kissecretary of state of Helip Ris-singer. Syria's aims in these efforts were a just and lasting peace, the liberation of the occupied Golan Heights, and a guarantee for the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people. If was for these legitimate reasons that Syria and Egypt went to war in October 1973. After the October War, American offers were made to achieve limited Israeli withdrawal from the Golan not taking into considera-tion the rights of the Palestinians. This Syria refused, connecting its rights with those of the Palestinian people, and concentrating its ef-lorts in this direction. But the Lebanese crisis came to involve the Syrians, Lebanese and Palestinians in a side issue, diminishing the chances of a peaceful settlement which had become quite attainable With all of these circumstances

With all of these circumslances in mind, is it not clear what Syria wants in Lebanon, and why it has tried relentlessly to bring about an end to the fighting?

The answer of course has been given added emphasis in the Summit Conferences of Riyadh and Cairo. The decisions made by the Riyadh limited Summit on October 18 did not differ in form and content from the principles and aims 18 did not differ in form and content from the principles and aims advocated by Syria. For these reasons Syria took active part in the Conference, as it had worked all along to achieve the aims approved by the participants in the Conference.

Syria's position has remained unchanged throughout the crisis, thus changed throughout the crisis, thus increasing the efforts and sacrifices made by the Syrian people in their noble struggle to protect their Lebanese and Palestinlan brothers

Lebanese and Palestinian brothers from these tragic events.

Today, hope is renewed, with the blessings of the Cairo Summit of October 25, that an end to this tragedy is close at hand. A new stage has begun during which common Arab efforts will be renewed in the confrontation with the Zionic enemies and for the rethe Zionist enemies and for the return of occupied Arab territories.

The Corrective Movement in the Syrian Arab Republic on its sixth anniversary looks forward with opumism ro further contributions to erasing the ill effects of the Lebanese tragedy as well as to a better and brighter future.

Syria In a Period of Economic Growth

A visitor to the Syrian Arabic Republic today might well think he is touring a huge workshop; throughout the country one sees factories under construction, roads being built, and recently finished bridges and buildings. The vitality and energy in the country's economy can best be seen in its main harbor cities of Lattakia and Tastous where scores of shirs have to wait for days for their turn to unload their cargoes. New modern highways have been constructed linking all the cities and towns of Syria.

The Syrian economy during Hafez Assad's Presidency since 1970 has been characterized by two main features:

1) The open-door policy both internally and with foreign countries.

2) The establishment of major projects. The Open-Door Policy and with foreign countries.

2) The establishment of major projects.

The Open-Door Policy:

The importance of the open-door economic policy at this stage stems from its comming after a period of isolation during which the country was deprived of foreign investments, and local capital was forced to seek foreign markets. The country's economy was in need for a shot in the arm. Therefore the most important steps taken were, first, the law governing foreign Investments, and, secondly, the endorsement of all international agreements which protect and guarantee capitals and investments.

The law of Foreign Investments offers many exemptions, facilities and advantages which help increase the financial profit of investments, in addition to strengthening the country's ties with world economy. New free Zone areas have been established to make better use of Syria's strategic and trade location. This step has enhanced the importation and storage of foreign products and encouraged the exportation of local goods and international 'commercial exchange.

These steps played a considerable role in

These steps played a considerable role in gaining the confidence of Arab and foreign investors, thus giving the country the benefit of foreign investments in a variety of economic sectors.

2) A developed agriculture capable of reporting its produce to foreign markets.

3) A tourist industry which brings foreign currency into the country. The authorities have an empted to develop these three sectors of the country's economy. Towards this aim President Assad's Administration has given priority to the establishment of major projects, contracts for which have been signed with foreign countries. These projects have had a verybeneficial effect on the national economy and have become centers of development contributing to other sectors of the economy and to many peripheral industries employing hundreds of Syrian workers.

The aim of these projects is the exploitation of Syria's natural resources such as petroleum, phosphates, and saft, and the development of the country's agricultural and geographic location since Syria occupies a strategic center in the transportation network of the entire region.

The Administration's agricultural policy sinu mainly at giving the country self sufficiency in food products such as grains, rice, regetables, fruits, and cotton. This policy also works for a surplus in these products to be exported to neighboring countries which suffer from the fack of food stoffs.

The following is a list of the most impor-

The following is a list of the most impor-tant major projects which have been set up in Syria and which required great effort in terms of capital, manpower, and technical skills:

1) The Euphwates Dam: This project will attinuately brigate 640,000 hectares of azable land, and will generate 1.1 million kilowatts per hour, while the Dam has already helped as the reclamation of 20,000 hectares in the Rega area. Many contracts for land reclamation, seed selections and annual familing have been signed with toreign countries and firms.

and firms.

2) The Nitrogen Fertilizer factory: The project aims at supplying the country with all its needs of fertilizers. The product of this factory in 1975 reached $6,000 tons.

3) The national exploitation of perfoleum Syria's petroleum production for this year reached $0.1 million tons. This has also led to the establishment of a number of petrochemical industries.

4) Phosphate mining near Faimyra: The total product of this project (or 1975) reached SS7,000 tens.

5) Extensions have been added to the Lattakia Harbor, and the Fort of Tartons has been exhibitshed, equipped with the most modern facilities.

6) In the transportation sector Lattakia has been linked with Deir B-Zor by a modern reliway which is also to be extended to Kamishiy. Another railway has been constructed between Tartons and Homs, and a modern highway setwork has been halft Hetween the country's cities and forwas.

There are two focal points for the kinestments in the Fouriti Five Year Plan. End, the establishment of basic industries. These will include petrochemicals, two oil refinering in Tartous and Banias with retord canacity of 15 million tons, and a minute of correct factories to meet the growing need for this basic material. In the agricultural sector, the Syrian fourth five-Year flan aims at the reclamation of 240 thousand hectares in the Etibhrates Dam area, the construction of 58 small dams, and a number of grain silos. The tourist policy of the present Adminis-tration has resulted in a marked increase in the number of tourists as seen in this table:

Hockey 'Mongst the Hookers

By FRANCIS X. CLINES

Even between the strolling hookers on Eighth Avenue and the 10th Avenue variety who cater at corners to slow-driving motorists on carnal prowl, childhood can be a meadow, an asphalt meadow.

Minutes after he gets home from school, 14-year-old Brian Mullen suits up in his ragamuffin-eclectic bockey up in his ragamuffin-eclectic bockey outfit, clambers down in boot roller skates from his fourth-floor tenement apartment and skates past the store-front garage of chestnut and pretzel vending carts and across West 49th Street to get Ralphie, Kenny, Dizzy and the other guys into their daily frenzy of street hockey.

In the early winter nip, it is the fastest game on 49th, faster than the hookers and eternally more innocent. A few hours with Brian as he cuts and checks, feeds and scores, and races back and forth across the schoolyard rink with great whirring strides of joy, is a restorative without equal for anyone wondering lately whether humanity has packaged and peddled itself into a fatally indentured circus.

Brian is a winner—74 goals and 34 assists in the Queens league alone last year. He is so good at roller hockey, leading the forward lines of various pickup church and club teams, that he has graduated to ice skates, being the youngest member of the West Siders ice hockey team, a group that makes the Skyrink on West 33d into a neighborhood shrine on weekends. With his pumping legs and flicking wrists, Brian is positioning himself to follow in the honored memory of his two older hrothers, Tom and Joe, who skated their way from the tenement leagues to the current ice hockey teams at Boston College and American International College in Massachusetts.

Every city neighborhood with children has its all-consuming sport. In this case, hockey has dominated for decades. A laid-off cop returned to a neighborhood game recently and told of his own childhood victories, obviously facing some poignant moment in his life, according to Brother Mark Cavanagh, the coach at Sacred Heart parish, which has fielded powerhouse teams for years.

While all about us there is the de-pressing TV-induced threat of children wasting away as mere sports spectators, Brian and his frieods are living the real life of childhood. And his contests feature such refreshing sights as Puerto Rican hockey players, a develop-ment roughly akin to developing a line of Jewish jockeys, and one that surely can be engendered only on the streets of New York. (The kids talk reverently of Egar Alejandro, a tenement alumnus with a great shot who helps coach now at American International College.)

The hoys' conversation is routinely raw with sexual denigrations, but Brian seems to pay only half attention, main-out of the scrapping pack.

Between scrimmages the hoys already are building the oral traditions that will comfort them into the future. Ralph Irizarry, Brian's wingmate, expands on the triple overtime victory over College the triple overtime victory over College Point a few years ago, and another game where Brian scored two goals in the final 33 seconds for a 6 to 5 victory. "Hey, man, we took them apart."

And the Great Wheel Switch when a terrible 12-to-1 drubbing by a Brooklyn team was followed by the decision to switch to competition wheal instead switch to composition wheels instead of the steel ones because of the foreign Brooklyn rink. The result? "We won 6 to S in nouble overtime," says Brian, slapping the remark home like a puck.

The hockey is so intoxicating that it seems to produce extended innocence. "Nah, I gave up drinking," says 22-year-old Kenny Steen, skating along-side Brian and Ralph last week. "I want to keep playing," he continued, his face relaxed and straggly with the need of a shave. "I even go all the way up to Dyckman Street on weekends—those guys are animals." he says apprethose guys are animals," he says appre-ciatively.

A week ago, Brian had math, Spanish and English to figure into his tragically short hockey evening, and when Raiph asks about some extended play, Brian says, "Well, I got a lot of homework." Ralph responds in the great groaning, nasal objection that has been universal for New York's street children for decades: "C'mon-n-n."

Back in the scrimmage, a break-away with Brian up front. He closes on goal guarded by Kenny Byriter, a 14-yearold whose missing tooth (lost, like his soul, to hockey) is shielded from view by his moderately ghastly hockey mask. A cross pass to Ralph who seems to let the defense set on him before flicking the puck hack to Brian, who is open and scores as Kenny collapses like a skeleton an instant too late for the block.

The score is a great moment on 49th Street, with dusk already in and the sodium street lights backlighting the players. There is a deep, perfect cold, the kind that produces red noses and serenity. The lights are on in Brian's serenity. The lights are on in Brian's tenement, dinner is on the stove.

"I gotta go," Ralph says, and he skates east on 49th Street, a scuttling, intense figure leaning forward on his wheels, the lighted skyscrapers of midtown looming beyond Eighth Avenue. Brian plays on, with only a few players and very little talk setting the tone for the final chance, the final burst of motion and scheming as chimney smoke drifts above the tenements. Finally, Brian is spent and hungry and he skates across the stret and walks four flights across the stret and walks four flights up to home, still in his skates.

Series of Pair Games Held Limited to Experts Only

By ALAN TRUSCOTT

One of the paradoxes of bridge is that weak players like to play against strong players, although expecting to lose, while strong players do not enjoy playing against weak players, although expecting to win.

Winning against experts is an achievement. Winning against the rank and file is not.

As the experts are in a mingrity, their wishes are not usually considered by organizers. But one cluh recently decided to provide for their special re-quirements, and scheduled a series of special pair games, for experts only and scored hy international match points. The second of the series will be played tonight at the Manhattan Cluh (formerly the Colony Club) at 228 West 71st Street. The first game, played last Thursday, was won hy Harold and Joyce Lilie of Woodmere, L.I.

The idea for the game was put forward hy Alan Sontag, the Manhattan Cluh's resident professional as one of the country's top players. He held the East cards on the diagramed deal, and used hrilliant reasoning to defeat a three no-trump contract.

Opening Lead Choice Wide

Very light opening bids are acceptable in third seat for lead-directing reasons. Sontag therefore chanced one spade, comforted by the favorable vulnerability. South overcalled one notrump, which was interpreted by North as showing 15-17 points, alightly less than the standard range. North took a shot at game, and Neil Silverman, as West, had a wide choice of opening leads.

It was clear that East had opened light, so his failure to take pre-emptive action suggested that he did not have more than five spades. The other suits offered better prospects, hnt the choica between them was tricky. A heart lead was too likely to give the declarer a was too harly to give the declarer a trick, and would have done so, harring a weird lead of the ten or an even weirder lead of the king.

A club lead did not offer much hope of developing tricks, so he settled for the deuce of diamonds. This set the defense on the road to two tricks in the suit, and turned out to be the only lead to put the contract in jeopardy.

South played low from the dummy captured East's ten with the king, and led a low spade. The ten was covered

Crash and Disaster

By RICHARD WITKIN

THE LAST NINE MINUTES by Moira John-ston. 306 pages. William Morrow & Co. $10.

DESTINATION. DISASTER by Paul Eddy Elains Fotter, and Bruce Page. 284 pages. Quadrangle/The New York Times Book Company, $12.50.

The occasional airline crash is inevitably a hideous shocker, even though statistics show that a trip by air is much safer than most other types of travel.

In decades past; even into the 1960's, the shock was too often compounded by evidence that a plane had gone down because of a critical defect in design, But the art of engineering has leaped ahead. Today, a fatal design flaw is an extreme rarity, and most crashes can be traced to vicious weather or human error unconnected with design. If a defect does slip through, the engineers will usually bave made sure that the hazards would be neutralized by backup mechanisms or other safety valves. Tragically, this was not the case with the original McDonnell Douglas DC-10 jumbos jets. Specifically, it was not the case with a Turkish Airlines DC-10 operated to Western Europe on March 3, 1974.

At about 12,000 feet, shortly after takeoff from Paris on a flight to Loodon, the plane's rear cargo door blew out, and the abrupt loss of pressure in the cargo hold caused the floor of the still-pressurized passenger cabin above to buckle into the hold. The collapsing floor severely damaged vital control cables. The plane smashed into a forest, killing all 346 persons on board. The toll was, and is, a record for an air

The reconstruction of what hap-pened, and why, are at the core of these two thoroughly engrossing and impressively documented new books. As both make clear, what stunned the aviation world was not so much that a new airliner could be downed by a design flaw. What was so appalling was that the flaw, far from being a and into discovered problem, had been terrifyingly spotlighted in a near-crash two years before, and that the industrygovernment system had permitted the needed fixes to be implemented in a scandalously slipshod fashion.

How did this come about? The investigation and lawsuits showed many shared the blame for the disaster. One Needed Change

The manufacturer, McDonnell Douglas, failed to carry oot at least one vital chaoge on the Turkish plane-a fix devised to make it impossible to force a correctly rigged cargo door to close improperly. There was some evidence that the door had, io fact, been misrigged, though who was responsible is in dispute.

There was much more. After the neas-crash of 1972, which was precipia DC-10 over Windsor, Canada, the high command at McDonnell Douglas and the Federal Aviation Administration reached a "gentleman's agreement" on door changes that in effect softpedaled their urgency. The National Transportation Safety Board, understaffed and distracted by an internal struggle over Nixon Administration interference with its overall operations, did not monitor the F.A.A.'s activities on the DC-10 case as closely as it ternal memo written after the Windsor incideot. Io it, a high-level engineer said additional DC-10 crashes resulting from cargo door loss seemed to him "inevitable" over the oext 20 years, and he urged his superiors to persuade McDonnell Douglas to make more fundamental DC-10 changes than door modifications.

The engineer's boss rejected the idea, He suggested that such an approach might mean that General Dynamics would have to assume all or much of the high cost and added: "We have an interesting legal and moral problem."

Well, he was certainly right about that.

Both books, while bringing excessive gore to descriptions of the crash scene, wisely avoid being shrill in deploring the actions that made the disasterhopefully a one-time aberration-possible. Moira Johnston's "The Last Nine Minutes" is written with greater emotion, and is more involving because it is so deeply concerned with the impact of a wholesale tragedy on devastated individuals. She has very sensi-tively interlaced technical developments with sometimes unbearably poignant accounts of how the victims' survivors coped with the initial shock and tried, with the help of friends and of their lawyers, to rebuild their lives.

Broader Coverage

"Destination Disaster," by a Londoo Sunday Times team, covers a broader landscape. It probes harder into the past for the factors that might explain cootinuing hazards. It urges resump-tion of Congressional inquiry to answer persisting questions about the Paris creat and to lead to be fold at all the regulation might be improved. "It is clear from an examination of the DC-10 the authors contend, there are serious weaknesses in the American regulatory system." Few experts would disagree.

One matter logically singled out for Congressional inquiry is the puzzle of how McDonnell Douglas's official records resuld show that the key fiv had been made on the Turkish plane's cargo door when, in fact, the wreckage proved this was not so. Among the few lapses in Miss Johnston's book, aside from the regrettable lack of an index.

is its brushing over this nagging issue.

The major lapse in the British book is a well-intentioned but grossly misleading appendix section rating the world's airlines on the basis of their safety records. But, in their verdict on the Paris crash, the Britishers have incisively captured the meaning of the Paris crash:

"Nations, certaioly, would not survive if they could not, at times, provide special moral frames within which ordinarily sace and decent people will cheat, lie, and even kill. 'If we did for ourselves what we are doing for Italy," said Count Caveur, 'what shocking

"Corporations, especially the large and complex ones with which we have to live, now appear to possess some of the qualities of nation states—includ-ing, perhaps, an alarming capacity to insulate their members from the moral consequences of their actions. It may be an inevitable tendency: It is nonetheless one which needs to be watched, understood, and controlled. The story of the DC-10, and of the disaster of March 3, 1974, may be understood in Italy' that they would for themselves."

Mr. Carter's World

World events and the world's leaders have been kind to the United States in this election year. No major crisis thrust itself into the Presidential contest. The candidates were able largely to ignore turbulence on the international scene, such as China's leadership change, civil war in Lebanon, elections in Italy and West Germany, Britain's economic plunge and Europe's monetary disorder. But pressures now building in these and other areas will require Presidential decisions in the early weeks of the Carter Administration.

A rapprochement with Peking has been sought by Moscow with increasing zeal since Mao Tse-tung's death and state-to-state contacts are likely to improve slowly, despite ideological disputes. This does not suggest any need for panic in Washington. China's pragmatic leaders are unlikely to abandon the triangular relationship with the United States and Russia that has served Chinese as well as American interests since 1971. But the balance could shift gradually to the American disadvantage.

Soviet-American relations thus could readily be affected. Moves to reinforce Soviet interest in détente and restraint are essential. If the strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT II), shelved for almost a year by President Ford, is to be concluded rapidly, Pentagon opposition will have to be overcome or overruled. Together with a new move on trade and credits, undertaken with Congressional accord, a SALT treaty could lay the basis for the long-delayed meeting that Mr. Brezhnev wants. In return, there could be pressure on Moscow to carry out its pledges to reduce the Cuban expeditionary force in Angola that, otherwise, might turn up elsewhere in want to meet with his allies. There is much to be said for another economic summit on the pattern of Rambouillet and Puerto Rico-but this time involving the Common Market, as well as the national leaders of Europe and Japan. It would permit political consultation as well as economic decisions to reverse the trend toward renewed world recession. If the drift toward Communist participation in the Governments of Italy and France is not to become irreversible, the economic atmosphere in Europe must be altered. Economic leadership from Washington could also pave the way for a new approach to West Germany and France to halt the export of reprocessing plants, which fabricate plutonium for nuclear bombs.

A new move to negotiate a Mideast settlement is vital to defuse the world's most explosive region, even if substantial progress is unlikely before the Israeli elections in October. New proposals are needed to revive the stalemated North-South dialogue in Paris, bogged down on issues of third-world debts and commodities.

The Ford Administration's defense budget will require overhaul, with multiple decisions on the B-1 strategic bomber, the cruise missile, the MX mobile ICBM, the Trident submarine, terminally guided warheads and other weapons systems that could prejudice arms control

The pressure for vital international decisions which will oot only shape the course of the new Administration but affect the fortunes of all nations clearly makes the selection of talented and experienced aides in the areas of diplomacy, defense, intelligence and arms control a task of utmost urgency as Mr. Carter prepares to assume his awesome responsibilities.

Consensus Statement

The part played by the United States in arriving at the United Nations Security Couocil's unanimous "consensus statement" on Israeli occupation of Arab territories was entirely constructive, and deserved praise instead of the rather hysterical blame it has

It is generally agreed-by Israeli diplomats among others-that the moderating influence of Amhassador Scranton and the American delegation succeeded in achieving a far less harshly worded statement than would otherwise have been the case. In fact, the statement, critical as it is of the Israeli settlemeot policy in occupied territories, is in complete conformity with the previously expressed American position on this

While it is obvious that the Israeli Government would bitterly object to any statement criticizing such settlements and other facets of its occupation, it is equally obvious-or should he-that the most useful thing the United States could do would be what it did do: exercise its influence on the side of restraint, while at the same time-without sacrificing the friendship of Israel-trying to maintain a tenable relationship with the more moderate Arabs by demonstrating that this country was not automatically hostile to whatever. position they might take.

If there is to be any hope at all that the United States will retain some leverage in advancing negotiations toward a peace in the Middle East, the United States must have the confidence of both sides; and it cannot have that unless it is perceived by both to be able to form its own independent judgments. It is in the interest neither of the United States nor Israel to demandor to expect-any less.

Northeastern Agenda

Governor Carey's dream of forging a strong regional alliance to press for more Federal aid for the depressed Northeast moved a big step forward last weekend at a cooference in Saratoga Springs sponsored by the infant Coalition of Northeastern Governors.

The ageoda for Federal action drawn up by the Governors will not be easy to fulfill. But officials in Washington cannot fail to be Impressed by the uniformity of purpose displayed by the bighly individualistic leaders of seven diverse states and by the quality of research and thought that went into recommendations lo such key areas as welfare reform, employment, energy and transportation. Certainly if the Governors meet with Mr. Carter oext mooth, as expected, they will find considerable common ground in such areas as welfare reform and the creation of jobs, to which both have given high priority.

The more difficult task may be selling the Northeastern agenda to Congress. Much will depend nn the effectiveoess of a oewly formed coalition of Congressmen from the Northeast, on their ability to form working alliances with members from other regions to promote common concerns, and to stand firmly together in bargaining with other regions to gain for the Northeast a fairer share in all Federal programs.

Part of the solution can be found in a concerted effort at mutual self-help, such as Felix Rohatyn's plan for a Regional Energy Development Corporation which Mr. Carter's representative hailed as a potential "centerpiece" for Northeastern revival. Although the corporation will require Federal help in the form of bond guarantees, its success depends predominantly on local initiative and cooperation. Not only New York and New Jersey, but all of the coalitioo should be involved in planning for this vital commoo enterprise.

Electoral College Reform

The closeness of the vote in the Presidential election has once again revived interest in reform or abolitico of the Electoral College.

President-elect Carter pointed out in a post-election news conference that his winning majority of 51 percent is substantially greater than the percentage of the popular vote attained by other recent Presidents such as Harry Truman in 1948, John F. Kennedy in 1960, and Richard Nixon in 1968. Indeed, leaving aside Lyndon Johnson's 1964 landslide, he is the first Democrat to obtain a clear majority of the popular vote since Franklin D. Roosevelt won in 1944.

Nevertheless, the country in this election narrowly escaped an anomalous or awkward outcome. If Mr. Ford had carried New York, he would have achieved an Electoral College majority even though he still trailed by approximately one and one-half million votes. This anomaly did occur in 1888. Or, the shift of a few thousand votes in Delaware and Ohio would have produced a tie-269 votes each-in the Electoral College and sent the election to the House of Representatives for decision.

Once an election goes to the House-as It did in 1824 and 1876—the numerous opportunities for delay and manipulation are clearly worrisome. The new House does not meet uotil early January, barely two weeks before the President is to be inaugurated. Moreover, the members of the House would not vote as individuals hut are required by the Constitution to vote as state delegations, opening up the prospect of deadlock if many delegations are evenly divided between the parties.

It is against this background of potentially harmful delays and complex contingencies that the demand arises for outright abolition of the Electoral College. Yet, reliance on the popular vote alone does not guarantee simplicity and dependability. According to a study hy the Library of Congress, only 16 states have laws that specifically provide for recounting the vote cast for President. If the nationwide vote were close, there would be demands for recounts in many states and districts. This could, in turn, lead to demands for Federalization of the entire electoral process. Abolition of the Electoral College and uniform Federal election rules would thus mean a further decline in the authority of the states and homogenizing of the American system of government, a trend that would be welcomed hy some and deplored by others.

Major efforts in Congress to alter the workings of the Electoral College or to substitute direct election of Presidents have come to nonght. No action has been taken because there has been no consensus on the political consequences for liberals and conservatives if the Presideotial voting system were altered and also because of a reluctance to drop nr change radically an arrangement which, notwithstanding its defects, usually works

In Electoral College reform-as in the reform of campaign spending-the best is often the enemy of the good. Rather than make a drive for abolition of the Electoral College or for its radical transformation—a drive that might fall short of its goal once a proposed constitutiooal amendment reached the state legislatures for ratification-reformers should perhaps first concentrate on eliminating two widely recognized risks.

If the electoral votes of a state were cast by a designated official and the merely honorific post of elector aholished, that would eliminate the problem of individual electors voting cootrary to the will of the people io that state. Secoodly, the Constitution could he changed to provide that in the event an election goes to the House of Representatives, the members would vote as Individuals, thereby elimioatiog the problem of equally divided state delegations. These are small improvements but they should not be delayed simply because there is lacking the necessary overwhelming majority in favor

Letters to the Editor

Of India's Course and the U.S.

As one with a long interest in India who has had the privilege of meeting Mrs. Gandhi on several occasions, may I attempt to put political developments there into some perspective.

Americans who cow lament India's forsaking of democracy, and it is indeed regrettable, are too prone, however, to overlook the niggardly encouragement that the U.S. has given this young nation in becoming a viable democratic state, both before and after its independence. Prior to its freedom, U.S. policy on India was to have no policy, and, moreover, we delayed tragically exerting pressure on Britain to extend freedom. Since independence, we bave blown bot and cold in our political relationships and diplomatic postures. We bave not consistently treated this strategic nation as an outpost of the free world when even our own interests dictated so doing. So Mrs. Gandhi's cynicism about the genuineness of our laments over the fate of democracy in India is not without basis.

As much as I wish Mrs. Gandhi had continued oo the pathway of democracy, I do not see her in the image of totalitarian leaders of our own era, Hitler, Mussolini, Stalin, Franco and company. I am prepared, also, to believe she bas not betrayed the essential principles of her illustrious father or her mentor, Mahatma Gandhi, as I think she is as deeply committed as they to true freedom in India.

I accept her contention that swifter progress must be made in overcoming India's gargantuan internal problems and nothing, even the democratic process, alas, can stand in the way of attaining this goal. Her conviction that India's adherence to democracy was not, and is not, redeemable in substantial and assured American nr Western European aid in solving these problems is understandable. To write Indis off, as oow seems to be the U.S. disposition, will only contribute to the foreclosure of India's re-emergence into the free world. GORDON B, HALSTEAD Peru, Vt., Nov. 8, 1976

Electoral Mathematics

To the Editor:

The closeness of the recent Presidential election raises again the specter of a divided verdict; the possibility that one candidate wins in the Electoral College while the other wins the popular vote.

As a mathematician who has done research oo the effect of the Electoral Collège system, I have computed estimates for the likelihood that a divided verdict occurs in a Presidential election. If the popular vote margin is 2.2 percent of the votes cast (Carter's margin over Ford), the estimate for the probability of a divided verdict is 23 percent, i.e., about one chance in four. If the popular vote margin is .2 percent (as in 1960), the probability of a divided verdict would be 47 percent. These values are based oo tha empirical record by modeling state voting patterns over the tweotieth century by oormal distributions.

One may also estimate the likelihood that a third-party candidate prevent an Electoral College majority. Assuming a major party popular vote margin of .g percent (as in 1968) and 46 electoral votes for the third-party candidate (equal to Wallace's total in

While 200 million Americans elected their President, 600 million Indians were denied again their right to choose their leaders.

Contrary to popular belief, Indians have generally exercised their voting rights in greater percentages than citizens io many developed countries. The indian masses may be poor, uneducated and unsophisticated in the Western sense, but they are not stupid. Mrs. Gandhi realizes this, hence the repeated postponement of elections.

Unfortunately, many Americans and Westernized Indians continue to believe that democracy and universal adult franchise cannot work in poor and developing countries. This persistent elitist attitude is no different from the racist rationalization of Western colonialists of yesteryear.

Now, the long arm of Mrs. Gandhi's secret police (R.A.W.) is making its presence felt in this country. R.A.W. agents are being assigned to the emhassies and consulates in increasing numbers to intimidate Indian dissidents living abroad. In this country, they will joio the successful penetration by the K.C.I.A. (South Korea) and SAVAK (Iran). Whereas the latter are the offspring of the American C.LA., parallel its methods and have been tolerated here, the former was inspired by and structured on the Soviet Union's K.G.B. In fact, the treaty between the Indian and Soviet Governments provides for mutual exchanges.

The K.C.I.A. and SAVAK are already well entrenched. The perils of toleratiog such activities because they are directed toward aliens nr recent citizens for some supposed security interests with allies can be well seen by the recent revelations regarding South Korea. It is to be hoped that the new Secretary of State will not let morality and human rights be sacrificed oo the altar of political that year), the probabilities are as follows: Electoral vote winner wins popular vote: 37 percent; divided verdict: 20 percent; no Electoral College majority: 43 perceot. It is a matter of luck that all three of the close Presidential elections during the past two decades have produced clear-cut winners who have appeared to lead the popular vote. Any decision concerning reteotion of the Electoral College system must take into account quantitative estimates of the many subtle effects of this peculiar method for counting the votes.

In Defense of Bilingual Education

Henry M. Gould's Nov. 3 letter questioning the efficacy of bilingual education on "pedagogical grounds" runs counter to current upinion in education. Studies such as the Fleischmann Report (1972), the Coleman Report (1964) as well as the Fishman Study (1972) all point not only to the viability but also the desirability of hilingual education. Other studies show that bilingual education is not confusing and more helpful than the old-style immersion metbod.

Mr. Gould points to his experience in a class of Yiddish- and Polish-speaking studeots in 1913, taught monolineually, and states that "... we had no hilingual classes at that time." The fact is that the Board of Education's predecessor did indeed recognize the value of bilingual education in New York City's public schools in 1837, when a full yaar of subject-matter instruction io German for the children of German immigrants was offered. Before the anti-German backlash triggered by World War I produced a spate of laws requiring public school instruction in English ooly, bilingual programs flourished in all parts of the country. Since 1972, teo states have adopted legislation specifically mandating bilingual education, and many more enacted laws permitting local school districts to provide bilingual education. In addition, the Board of Education of New York Clty agreed that bilingual educatioo is pedagogically sound wheo it signed the Bilingual Consent Decree in August

Notwithstanding any of the above, the key question we must consider is: Are we as a society willing to accept the notion of a child not learning mathematics, scieoce and social studies for a number of years, and therefore retarding that child's educational progress for the sake of a pure Englishlanguage instructional method?

ASPIRA of New York, the plaintiff in the Federal court case mentioned by Mr. Gould, feels that wa cannot ignore the needs of 300,000 Hispanic children in our city's public school system. An exclusively mnnolingual method will waste the lives of tens of thousands of young people needlessly.

More Carrots, No Appeasement

By Liane Ellison Norman

PITTSBURGH - While chopping vegetables the other night. I listened to the radio. The question was, who might succeed Mr. Kissinger? Suddenly, I thought, "Why shouldn't I be his successor?"

"Nonsense," said the voice on the radio. The next Secretary of State must have splendid qualifications! He must be schooled by the Ivy League. befriended by powerful men, published by learned journals. Such a man would not chop onions! But, I thought, who says those are the best qualifications? Why assume that a man so credentialed is the best able to do the job?

The radio went on to other things. the vegetables went into the soup, but the thought persisted "What!" Hanmbal Persiflage, the pundit, would thunder. "Foreign policy is no laughing matter!" For the prevailing wisdom-is that foreign affairs are more solemn than domestic ones. Phoebe Rankle says Jimmy Carter should not have "smirked" in the second television debate, because it was about matters of foreign policy. And it is a solemn thing to bave it so nearly in one's power to make war.

Yet too much seriousness is a danger. Charlotte Bronte wrote that the great man "forgets, pitilessly, the feelings and claims of little people, in pursuing his own large views The insignificant [must] keep out of his way, lest, in his progress, he should trample them down."

"That's the problem." I thought. The Secretary of State is so taken with large views that he cannot help hut get carried away, losing his sense of proportion. Everything in the world seems his affair and a matter of life

I asked my friend Jo Simplesmith, a recognized genius, what she thought. She whooped in delight, "But, Madame Secretary, how will you keep from getting infected with large

"I thought of that," I said. "First, I'd work as Secretary of State only part-time."

"Yes," murmured Jo, "overwork often looks like seriousness. A lot of bad policy is made by tired, self-important people, yet because they have position their affliction is seen as

I reminded Jo that much foreign policy exists to assert, consolidate and expand claims to empire. Less foreign policy altogether would require simpler tastes and lower consumption, for great affluence and high profits mean empire. Empire means intervention. Intervention means war (or the threat thereof). A part-time Secretary's foreign policy would be less, and of necessity, closer to home. "A Secretary who served half-time," I pointed out, "would be only balf as dangerous."

"And here is the great point." told Jo. "No Secretary of State who is a mother could think of power in the abstract.

oratorical. "Yes," she said, "the men, like Abraham, sacrifice our sons in obedience to promptings they call boly. As Secretary of State, you could not make any policy that sent your children as the state's hired guns."

"Indeed not," I said, "and the world is full of children, so bow could I explain to mine the proposition that they are or ooght to be Number One?"

Jo added, "Or how could you explain a 'national security' that means they are entitled to more wealth, resources, energy, prestige than kids in other countries? Or a policy that uses violence to show who's boss, when you don't allow the use of force at home?" "Okzy," she said, "what will you do first, on taking office?"

"Oh, maybe call a press conference," I pondered, "and declare that the Indothe Government should ask the people's pardon for the abuse of democratic process in that war, for the death, injury, dislocation, and exile of its sons;

for the damage done to Indochinese lives and soil. Announce the provision of reconstruction aid to Indochina (and, of course, we come information about the M.L.A.'s). Say that foreign policy will recognize that power has limits, as do the officials who wield it. And announce my motto, from Sbakespeare, that "the abuse of greatness is when It disjoins remorse from power."

The children burst in, just then, hungry and full of chatter. Foreign policy had to wait.

On Beating Grandmother

By Russell Baker

Another problem we have in New York is children beating up grandmothers. Sometimes they kill them, although the usual thing is just robbery. Sometimes the children are quite young. Ten, twelve, thirteen years old. Sometimes the grandmothers are old enough to be great-grandmothers. The other day two pubescent bnys did a street-mugging job on a woman who later told policemen she was 103.

This may have been a new record for assault across the ages. You can't be sure. If such records are kept at all, they are bound to be unreliable, since we go for long periods bere in New York of not being interested enough in this kind of assault to keep the records very well. Right now, everyone is excited about children brutalizing old people and we keep a keen eye for records, the better to savor the excitement of the moment.

Next week, the week after, there will be a new problem. Battered babies, botulism, infectious arson, police disgruntlement, rampant venereal disease. Something. But this week, all attention focuses on beaten grandmothers and insensitive childhood, and everyone is solicitous of the terror in which old people now live. The police. of course, will make special efforts. City Hall expresses concern. Cries of public outrage. Etc.

Next week we will bave the same responses for the new problem, but there is no point in being cynical about the ease with which New York transfers its alarm from one insoluble problem to another. In a city this size a problem is very lucky indeed to get a whole week's play in the news; most problems are lucky to get ten seconds on the local TV roundups.

In any case, one of the things you do here when there is a heavy problem in the news is leap to sociological conclusions about What It All Means (W.].A.M.). The hattered-grandmother movement is particularly ripe for such speculation, since almost any conclusion you leap to is bound to touch on some of New York's most sensitive nerves and guarantee à satisfying argument that will take everybody's mind off the batterings of old people.

My own inclination, for example, would be to explain this kind of crime in terms of family breakdown. Even a child reared by criminal parents will be taught a decent respect for old people, if only out of self-serving motives in his felonious parents, who, anticipating dotage, will want the successor generation of criminals to do the decent thing by their forebears.

It is reasonable to conclude that most criminal parents upon learning that a child of theirs has beaten and robbed a grandmother, would give him such a forceful lesson in the nastiness of abusing the elderly that he would never do it again. The fact that this crime is gaining popularity among New York children suggests that either they have no families to underline such lessons, or that the families they have are no longer doing their jobs.

That suggestion will irritate certain modern thinkers who contend that the family is obsolete and-worse-a social prison in which the creative impulses of its members are stifled.

Persons who believe there is no such thing as a bad boy may be even more annoyed. I don't want to suggest that strong family discipline will stop these street-criminals from proceeding into a life of crime, but only that family can turn their natural criminal inclinations toward activities less odious to society.

This suggestion is based on a recognition of the limits of family power. It assumes a certain number of bad people in the world. If you happen to get one born into your family there is no reason why the family should be blamed. The best the family can do is to channel criminal impulses into something relatively respectable, such as safecracking or political bribery, and pray for the best.

What we now have in New York is a lot of really rotten kids exposing their true nature because family influence bas failed to train them to conceal it. The percentage of really rotten people on earth has probably been constant over the millenia; the barbaric periods differ from the civilized by the breakdown of constraints which, in civilized times, keep the bad people from behaving perfectly

The most romantic interpretation of the perils of New York's old people is that it is an expression of America's contempt for or hatred of old age. and its idiotic worship of youth. This strikes me as great fun to argue over gin, but pretty silly. Americans may do ridiculous things, like installing new glands and putting 44-inch waistlines into custom-faded jeans, in order to hold onto the memory of youth, The number of us who beat the daylights out of grandmothers is, however, infinitesimal.

When you find a couple of lads born in the age of L.B.J. assaulting a woman horn in the Administration of Ulysses S. Grant, it is just as sensible to argue that today's youth is reacting in rage against the corruption of the Grant gang as to contend that it is expressing a national contempt for old folks. What we have are some very bad children who lack the family background required to channel their felonious instincts into more socially acceptable activities.

Medical Deans' Revolt

By Harry Schwartz

SAN FRANCISCO-The deans of most United States medical schools joined together here the other day to open the latest front of the general war against the ever more intrusive dictation from Congress and the bureaucracy in Washington.

Congress's order that a group of students be admitted to medical schools was the specific issue that touched off the deans' revolt at the annual convention of the Association of American Medical Colleges. But. this was merely the straw that broke this particular camers back.

Cynics, of course, will say that the medical school deans want the impossible: The deans welcome the rich flow of Federal and state millions that make the medical schools operations possible, but they don't want the pipers who pay the hills to call the times to which the schools must dance.

This assessment is probably overly harsh. The medical schools have tried hard to meet the social demands put upon them this last decade and to give good value for their money.

Thus in the last 10 years or so, for example, the nation's medical school enrollment and the annual number of American physicians graduating have roughly doubled. So efficiently and quickly has the production of doctors been raised in this country that Prof. Eli Ginzberg of Columbia University's Graduate School of Business warned the medical school officials here that a staggering surplus of doctors is just over the horizon. By the early 1980's, Professor Ginzberg estimated, this country will have many more doctors relative to population than any of the world's other industrialized nations that are trying to give their medical care. The medical school leaders feel that they have served the nation well in other areas as well. They have substantially increased the number of minority and women medical students, even at the cost of giving the former preference over some highly qualified applicants who happen to be of the "Wrong" sex or race.

citizens first-class modern scientific

The medical research accomplishments of the country's medical schools have already made the United States far and away the world leader in the fight against disease and death. The record of Nobel Prize winners in medicine since World War II is, to an amazingly great extent, primarily a n would be elected. hist of individuals who have taught at. Editorial Board of The Times.

or been trained by, or who have done their research at American medical

What drives the medical school deans beside themselves, however, is constant evidence they see that, no matter what they accomplish, those who control the monetary strings in Washington and in the state capitals are never satisfied and keep on posing ever-more demands, many of them frequently mutually contradictory.

Some of the anger of many of the deans is directed at particularly powerful governmental figures who are seen as having a dangerous taste for meddling in medical school affairs to an extent far beyond those individuals' knowledge and competence. In Washington, Senator Edward M. Kennedy is often named in this connection. In New York State, the man most often blamed is Dr. Kevin Cahill, Governor Carey's chief adviser on state medical policy.

Finally, the medical schools' patience is being tried beyond endurance by the proliferating labyrinth of laws and regulations that Congress and the bureaucrats have spewed out in an effort to control medical care costs and to impose government control over the future growth of the American medical system. Whatever Congress's original intent, this infinitely complicated web of regulations and laws always seems to entangle the medical schools most and to threaten very seriously both their solvency and their ability to do their jeb.

It is a symptom of the timidity of the medical school deans that when their revolt against bureaucratic oppression finally erupted these last several days, it was not over any of the great issues that really endanger the future of American medical education, but on the minor issue of the relative handful of Americans studying abroad.

Congress has directed the medical schools to admit these students after two years of foreign study if the individuals involved can pass a certain specified national medical competency examination. These students and their parents are apparently the only group the medical school deans feel it politically wise to challenge openly. After all, this group consists of a relatively small number of people, the students involved are predominantly white and predominantly male, and they and their families are relatively affluent. In short they don't have too fearsome a political "clout."

Of all the magazines studied in both the current 1976/1977 Simmons Audience Study and the previous one, FIELD & STREAM gained more total adult readers and more adult male readers than any other magazine.

Was this just circulation growth? Partly. But other magazines have grown more in circulation, yet not increased their readers per copy or total audience as dramatically.

Was it a statistical fluke? Probably not, since FIELD & STREAM'S growth was one of the largest, both in total audience and in key demographics in the 1974/1975 Simmons study. And, as Frank Stanton, President of the W.R. Simmons Company says, "Generally, magazines that did well among younger and more affluent people two years ago, continued to do well in the new study."

WHAT'S THE REAL REASON?

By HILTON KRAMER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15-Everyone said the "Treasures of Tutankhamen" show would be magnificent, and everyone was right.

Few exhibitions in recent museum history have been as avidly awaited, or indeed, as aggresively touted in advance, as this selection of Egyptian antiquities that opens tomorrow at the National Gallery of Art on the first leg of a nationwide tour. But those with high expectations resulting from all this hoopla will not be disappointed.

These "Treasures" are not only of great historical rarity; they are also objects of great esthetic splendor. Although the exhibition, which consists of 55 works, is not a large one by the standards set by recent biockbuster shows, and the objects themselves are small in size, their beauty is breath-

The exhibition gains much, of course, from the romance attending the discovery of Tutankhamen's tomb. It was in November 1922 that the British archeologist Howard Carter and his sponsor, the fifth Earl of Carnarvon. first uncovered the objects that had remained concealed for more than 2,000 years. This was one of the stellar events in the bistory of modern archeology for unlike the tombs of other Egyptian kings, Tutankhamen's was essentially intact-and has ever since retained an almost mythical status.

This aura of myth and romance is very much a part of the present exhibition—perhaps too much a part of the exhibition. By means of didactic charts, photographic blowups and extended captions on the walls, the visltor to the "Treasures" show is given a quick course in the history of ancient Egypt and a dramatic account of the tomb's discovery.

But all of this is ancillary to our experience of the objects on view. In the presence of these masterpieces, which represent an artistry unknown to modern times, the travails of archeology lose their relevance. It is as an exhibition of art, not of history, that "Tutankhamen" captivates the mind and bedazzles the senses.

The carved alabaster vases, for example, afford one of the most sublime experiences of the art of sculpture-of sculpture that seems to be carved not so much of stone as of light—to be found in the entire history ticular-a floral unguent vase elaborated with the most delicate open-form traceries of curved slender massesboasts a refinement not seen again until the Christian Middle Ages in Europe, and not really exceeded even in the masterworks of that legendary era.

The gold sculptures also offer us a variety of sculptural experience like no other that we know. Some are made of actual gold, hammered into forms both powerful and exquisite, and em-hellished with the most stunning orna-ment. But others, even more interesting to this observer, are actually gilded wood carvings-splendid, intricate examples of a genre, that of painted sculpture, in which the anonymous artists of ancient Egypt particularly ex-

One of the most magnificent of these is the figure of the goddess Selket—especially dramatic for the way the eyes, painted in bold black outlines, stare at us from the noble gold head. Another, even grander example, is the figure of Tutankhamen himself, here shown with a harpoon in his right hand in a rare scene of action.

There are also necklaces, furniture, crooks, chests, daggers and bracelets, even an ivory headrest consisting of a figure flanked by two lions that uphold this same exalted standard of refined artistry. We look, we admire, and we are finally staggered at the thought that so much that is so inspired was Intended never again to be seen by the human eye once its purpose had been пиниеа.

As the "Treasures" are installed at & the National Gallery, we experience them, of course, as modern objects, not as ancient relics. The light that transforms those alabaster vases is the light of modern display technology -It has nothing to do with the light (or the dark) of ancient Egypt The dazzling gold surfaces of the sculptures are like-wise a "fiction" wrought by modern museology. We have, in a sense, trans-formed the "Treasures of Tutankhamen" into something they never werean art to serve the modern appetite for esthetic delectation.

The comparatively low turnout in the Presidential election was apparently due to demographic factors such as the sharp increase of young people in the electorate rather than disillusionment, according to a New York Times and CBS News survey. The poll found that, among both voters and nonvoters, 55 percent believed that public officials had no concern for them. However, nonvoters tended to feel more power-less toward government. [1:5-6.]

A Postal Service surplus for the first time since the agency was set up in 1971 was reported for the months of July, August and September. The $15 million margin contrasted with annual deficits of up to $1 billion. It was attributed to a slight increase in volume and a cutback in employees. [18:1-2.]

Hegal kickbacks from commercial suppliers are widespread in New York State's health-care system, it was charged by the state's special mirsing-home prosecutor, Charles J. Hynes. The indictment of Stanley Steingut, Speaker of the State Assembly, and his son Robert, a City Councilman, on charges of corruptly offering a job for a campaign contribution, was thrown out by the Appellate Division of State Supreme Court in Brooklyn. Auto-insurance rates are determined under a system based in part on faulty statistics, according to increasing evidence. New studies also suggest that rate schedules unfairly burden young men and residents of New York City, who pay much more for auto insurance than drivers over 30 and rural upstate residents. Industry officials maintain that the rate structure is based on hard statistical evidence that certain groups are more likely to be involved in accidents, and that good drivers are not forced to subsidize bad ones. Industrial production fell in October for the second successive month, the Federal Reserve Board reonrted. The decline was five-tenths of 1 percent from September, which was revised downward. Less than one-third of the October drop was attributed to strikes and the rest of it to reduced demand. [55:5-6.]

American new car sales for Nov. 1-10 slipped 1.5 percent from a year earlier due in part to what analysts said was the impact of the Ford Motor Company strike. However, auto executives still expect the domestic share of the 1976 -market to show a 25 percent gain over last year, to 8.8 million cars. [55:1-2.]

Stock prices gained moderately in continued slow trading. The Dow Jones industrial average rose 7.73 points to close at 935.42, its high for the session. Jean Gabin, 72, French Film Star Who Played Hero-Victim, Is Dead

By JOHN L. HESS

Jean Gabin, the craggy and sardonic nero-victim of a hundred French films, died yesterday of a heart attack at the American Hospital in Neuilly, on the edge of Paris. He was 72 years old.

An actor since be was 18, Mr. Gabin at his death was as much a star as ever. One theater in Paris was showing a series of his triumphs under the heading "Gabin the Magnificent," and a dinner was scheduled Friday, at which he was to have been promoted to commander of the Legion of Honor, it was canceled when he was admitted to the hospital Saturday, sufferiog from bigh blood

The quintessential Gabin role was that of a loner, an outsider, usually a member of the lower orders, who may flirt with love and happiness but knows they are not for him—like Jeao Valjean in "Les Miserables," or Marecbal the mecbanic-soldier in "Grand Illusion," or Pepe Le Mokd, the title role in the film about a Parisian gangster in the casbah of Algiers. American Debut Delayed

The American debut of "Pepe le Moko" was long delayed to permit Walter Wanger to:make a Hollywood version in 1938 called "Algiers" and starring Charles Boyer and Hedy Lamarr, Wheo "Pepe" evil story, whereas Mr. Wanger's version was a romantic and necessarily cautious retelling of the same."

This may help explain why Mr. Gabin's brief wartime hitch in Hollywood yielded only a couple of soon forgotten roles, while critics have frequently found him perfectly cast in whatever French films he did. An actress once confided to a reporter:

"I thought I was the star in the first picture I made with Jean-until I saw the finished film. There was a scene in which he had no lines at all. He was just standing about while several of us were involved in a furious argument.

Sitting there in the dark, I found sudsuggested that whatever he was not say-ing was so much more interesting than what was being shouted by the rest of occasional performer.

"It is not illegal, but I do not think it is a desirable activity," Mr. Morgenthau said yesterday.

He said a similar approach had been used by the Commodore Hotel a couple of years ago when it wished to evict Relaxation Plus, a popular massage parlor. Once that eviction was upheld in court, Mr. Baumgarten said, be decided to adopt the technique.

Several other efforts to curb the spread of massage parlors have failed.

Under state law, prostitution is illegal, but it is extremely difficult to prosecute because of the difficulty in finding proof of "solicitation." Under a New York Police Departmen

Hidden Desire's landlord, the Hamilton Appliance Service Corporation, asked Mr. Baumgarten how to evict the establishment, and he suggested using private investigators.

Once the city had obtained the investi-gators' affidavits, it moved in State Supreme Court to have the massage parlor closed as a nuisance under a section of the Public Health Law. A temporary in-junction was granted last Tuesday by Jus-tice Thomas Hughes. The establishment at East S9th Street and Third Avenue, has been closed since then.

"If we don't use this route, there will be no way to deal with 75 percent of prostitution places in the city, even with a zoning law," Mr. Baumgarten said Last week the Beame administration disclosed a proposal that would strictly limit the number of massage pariors and other "adult-oriented" establishments.

"You still need the proof," Mr. Baumgarten said, adding that the use of private detectives to buy sex was not dissimilar from law-enforcement agencies' employ-ment of informants to buy drugs. But several law-enforcement officials

Medicaid reimbursement fees for the most frequently ordered laboratory tests will be reduced by up to one-half, thereby saving the program an estimated total of $3 million a year, New York City's Medicaid Administration announced yes-

The city's action is a part of an economy move designed to trim at least $10 million from New York's annual $1.9 bil lion in Medicaid expenditures, according to Dr. Martin Paris, the city's associate commissioner of health.

But the announcement yesterday, made jointly by Dr. Paris and by Forest Wiliams, director of medical assistance in the city's Department of Social Services, drew bitter criticism from representatives of the 250 laboratories in the city that participate in Medicaid.

"We are initiating a lawsuit against the city concerning these new rates," said Irvin R. Karasik, a lawyer who represents several small and medium-sized laborato-ries. "This is a must serious matter because our survival is at stake.

Mr. Karasik said that the new for schedule would be, in effect discriming tory toward the smaller laboratories because they would be much less able to absorb the cuthacks than some of the bigger laboratories, such as Metpath Inc.. of Hackensack, N.J.

Fashion Casts Its Eye on a Gossamer Spring

By BERNADINE MORRIS

Spring clothes aren't the snrt that will strike terror in the hearts of conservatives. effective the concept. Which has led designers on a worldwide search for gossamer-weight wools, silks and even cottons, which have a flow worth watching.

The idea is familiar enough for evening, where designers have let jersey and chiffon do their number for quite a few seasons. But a jacket that is light enough to be airporne? A coat of cloud-like mohair that drifts behind like the wake of a ship when the wearer moves briskly?

That's the message of the spring collec-tions, and it's formulated most heautifully for spring by John Anthony. His clothes are most casual in cut, most luxurdious to the tonch. He carries separates to a high

The formula works so well, it adapts for evening with just a few changes. Substitute satin pants for the gabardine skirt. Add a silk coat, striped and shaped like a hathobe, to a long skirt. But then there are sweater jackets, hand but their distance Montgomery, to toss over a crepe de chioe dress. And such a rothy concoction as a crepe de chine tunic over a gray flannel skirt, topped by a white mohair coat that looks as if it were made of spun sugar.

Evening is devoted to mists of chiffon, sometimes layered (pink over peach over toast), or crepe de chine, sometimes tailored into a shirt, pants and jacket, and sometimes strapless.

Miss McFadden's clothes aspire to art, bearing echoes of say, color field painting, or Celtic symbols. But these can also be enjoyed in their own right as fashions with a special mood.

Alfred won 177 games under Yune-vich, lost 85 and tied 12 and posted six undefeated seasons. His 1971 team won the Lambert Bowl as the East's leading Division III team. Following that undefeated season, Yunevich won the Stan Lomax-Irving T. Marsh Trophy as the outstanding Eastern small college coach.

During his early years in coaching, Yunevich turned down a number of of-fers from major colleges. He made it clear that despite tempting money of-fers he wanted to coach "where it is Yunevich was not at Alfred N. Y., yesterday when Dr. M. Richard Rose, the school's president, announced the coach's retirement. The coach was vacationing in Florida with his wife, Ann. Yunevich will finish his coaching career this spring as Alfred's golf coach.

Maybe it was the recruiting that turned Yunevich away from major college coaching. He would not have done well in a major college recruiting on an Alfred budget. For 1976, Yunevich turned in a recruiting expense account of $55.60.

While Yunevich's retirement was be-ing announced, another slightly young-er coach emphasized that he wanted very much to be coaching when he is 67. Paul (Bear) Bryant, the 64-year-old coach at Alabama, said in Birmingham that he wanted to be at Alabama when the Crimson Tide is scheduled to meet Notre Dame again in 1980. Speaking at a news conference, Bryant said, "How many 67-year-old coaches do you know who are still around and winning?" Since no one mentioned Yunevich, Bryant continued: "I hope I'm around then. I'm not near the coach I used to be and there are a lot of young coaches around who are doing well. Anybody I can find who can win more games than we can. I'll get him. But right now, looking out over the horizon, I don't see anybody."

Cozza Steps Down as Yale Coach: Remains as Elis' Athletic Directo

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 15-Carmen Cozza, the most successful football coach in Yale University history, announced tonight that he was stepping down to devote full time to his duties as athletic director. He made the announcement at the team banquet.

- Cozza, 46 years old, compiled a 77-30-1 won-lost-tied record in 12 seasons as Yale's head coach, leading the Elis to five Ivy League championships. Yale, which shared the crown with Brown this year, also had three second-place finishes under Cozza.

"When I was asked to take the ath-letic directorship last June, it was with the understanding that I give up my coaching duties at the end of the season," said Cozza. "The Yale Corporation [Board of Trustees] saw no reason to alter that decision." A native of Parma, Onio, Cozza is graduate of Miami University in Oxford, Ohio. He came to Yale as an as-sistant in 1963 and was named head coach in 1965. He has been chosen New England coach of the pear three times. A committee will be formed to begin the search for Cozza's successor.

Association of Amateur Athletes of America. Harvard won event and team members, right, carried Coach William McCurdy on their shoulders.

Harvard and Alitz of Army Capture Titles in IC4A Cross-Country Run

It took more time to decide the team champion at the ICAA cross-country meet yesterday than it did for Curt Alitz of Army to win the individual title. The 21-year-old Cadet, the runnerup last year, covered the five-mile course at Van Cortlandt Park in 23 minutes 58.1 seconds and finished 25 yards ahead of John Flora of Northeastern in the University Division.

It took almost 30 minutes, however to decide the winner in the closest team finish in recent years. Even after Har-vard was declared the surprising winner over Villanova by only 3 points, several other bizarre developments fueled otherwise chilly afternoon proceedings.

First, discrepancies occurred between the number of competitors who were counted at the three-mile mark (181) and the number who finished the race (185). Did four athletes hide out somewhere on the course for a portion of the race, perhaps behind a rock or along the cow path, and then rejoin the field? Or were the discrepancies a clerical error in the heat of combat? No one will ever know whether this situation could have altered the outcoin toss earlier in the week unques-tionably affected Villanova's chances for another crown.

The coin toss was to decide whether Don Paige, a sophomore, or Phil (Tiny) Kane, a senior, would become the seventh Wildcat entry. Kane, a 4:01° miler, called heads; the coin came up tails. Paige, who also has run a 4:01 mile, finished 50th yesterday in 25:34. An angry Kane won the junior varsity section in 25:06, a time that would have tied him for 22d place in the university division and given Villanova the team

"We shouldn't have flipped a coin," Kaoe said afterward. "The coaches should have made a decision. I thought I deserved the chance hecause I was a senior and I had a better persocal best, I wasn't going to run after I lost the coin flip. Then I decided to show them they made a mistake."

Villanova, trying to regain a crown in a sports it once dominated, also iost potential points when Steve Crooke, a junior, failed to finish, and Ed Takacs, on IC4A half-mile champion, was over-taken by four runners in the final 15

"It was a tough race all the way," said the 6-foot-2-inch, 165-pound cadet, who also swam competitively for Army last year hut intends to con-centrate oo track and field in the distance events. "I started breaking it right after three miles. I knew if they were close with 300 yards left. I'd be in trouble, because I have a poor kick."

The College Division team title was taken hy Lehigh, io another closely contested competition with Fairleigh Dickinson, 94 points to 108. Frank Richardson of Massachusetts Institute of Technology was the individual winner

It was Harvard's first team title io 45 years, and Jeff Campbell, who finished fifth, led the spirited squad in a series of cheers when the official resuit finally was aonounced.

The first five finishers count in team scoriog. Four Harvard runoers were among the first 20, but the Crimson had to sweat it out until 91st place before their fifth point-scorer reached the finish.

'We've had some seconds and thirds in the team competition over the years," said Coach Bill McCurdy, who

Their Lead at Stake Asthe Cowboys Play

IRVING, Tex., Nov. 15 (AP)—The Dallas Cowboys, sbooting for their best start ever in the National Football League and battling to keep ahead of the second-place St. Louis Cardinals in the National Conference'a Eastern Division, took on the Buffalo Bills at Texas Stadium tonight.

The Cowboys led, 14-7, midway in the third quarter.

Roger Staubach, who had missed some practices while suffering from influenza, was nonetheless the starting quarterback for the Cowhoys, who had never won nine of their first 10 games since they entered the league in 1960. Entering tonight's game, Dallas was 8-1. and the Cards were 8-2 after yesterday's 30-28 victory over Los Angeles.

Jakowenko Misses Field Goal The Bills, led hy O.J. Simpson, were 2-7, had dropped five games in a row, their loogest losing streak since 1972, and had lost their last three Monday oight appearaoces.

The temperature was hovering around the freezing mark at kickoff

The game was scoreless at the eod of the first period.

Buffalo took the opeoing kickoff and moved from its 3I-yard line to the Dallas 26, with Simpson running for short gains and Gary Marangi completing passes of 14 and 9 yards to Bob

This kick was the closest thing to a score either team could manage. The Cowboys never got out of their own. territory, as Staubach failed to connect on his first four passes. But then Dallas scored first, in the second quarter, on a 2-yard run by Preston Pearson.

A punt fumbled by the Cowboys' Butch Johnson at his 41 minutes later allowed the Bills to tie the game at 7-7. Three plays later Marangi hit Reuben-Gant with a 27-yard touchdown pass.

With the first half almost over, Buffalo missed an excellent chance to go in front when Marangi, on third and inches from his 35, barely missed connecting with Chandler, who had broken behind the Cowboys' defense and would have scored easily if he had held the hall.

Buffalo then punted, and, with only 24 seconds left, it seemed the half! would end in a tie.

But Stauhach hit Drew Pearson across the middle on a 40-yarder that carried to the Buffalo 21. On the following play, the Dallas quarterback floated a pass over the head of Doug Jones, safety, and Drew Pearson caught it 4 yards deep in the end zone for

Baron Long's Linden Tree Caper

N FRANCISCO, Nov. 14—Baron Long was a cheerful whose came is still a legend up and down the Pacific . He was a professional gambler with money, imaginaind a soaring talent for mischief. He loved opera deeply, othing by Verdi or Bizet or Wagner could fill his breast such exultation as the cries of hookmakers whom he :lipped for a hundle. He operated the famous U.S. Grant in San Diego, raced a string of horses and had a piece e old Tia Juana track across the Mexican border. After Tia Juana was replaced by Agua Caliente, he controlled that track. Almost 45 years Sports have passed since he brought off the Linden Tree caper but horseplayers in these parts remember it vividly. Not only horsete Times players in these parts, for Phil Bieber lives he remembers. This is how Phil and his er, Isador, heard it from Baron Long himself sitting in LS. Grant.

ong's friend, George Drumheller, fold him that his gster, Linden Tree, acted like a top horse. Certainly wasn't another 2-year-old south of the border that warm him up. He was making his first start at Caliin a two-furlong race for maidens on Jan. 7, 1932. abort races for 2-year-olds in January were always d as the first race of the day.

ong learned that he and Drumheller were by no means nly ones aware of Linden Tree's ability. The horse was to be a short-priced favorite. Long instructed his trainer ter two of his 2-year-olds, Sir Val and Don Alonzo, in ace. Then he got hold of Harry Fink, a former New bookmaker who owned horses, gambled on a large and was above all, an expert at laying bets off.

Emergency!

ong told Fink to bet $15,000 for him on Linden Tree pread it in small amounts among bookies all over the ry. Fink warned him that when the race train from ingeles and San Diego arrived with the seasoned promais, they would bet Linden Tree down to 1-to-10. _eave those details to me,' Long said. 'Just do as I ask.' ensing what was in the wind, Harry said: When the wire shows the price going up on Linden Tree, the s will start laying the bets off at the track. Then what I's my money and my worry,' Long said. 'Just take of your end."

n the morning of the race, the first train from Los les arrived in San Diego well loaded and picked up est of the Caliente regulars. As it pulled out of the station, a shrick was heard from a stont woman of middle age: 'Stop the train! Please stop! My husband is dying! Get a doctor quick!

"Somebody yanked the emergency cord and the train stopped. Seeing a man collapsed on the woman's lap, the conductor ran through the cars calling for a doctor. 'Has anyone some whisky or hrandy?" the woman pleaded. A man handed her a flask. She tilted her head back and took a deep draft, 'Old Taylor,' she said. Thanks,' she said, and handed back the flask. The sick man grunted.

"The conductor arrived with a doctor who made a quick examination and said he would call an ambulance. 'Don't touch or move the patient,' he called over his shoulder as be hurried off.

The ambulance arrived. Attendants placed the man on a stretcher. The wife followed them off the train. The ambulance drove to the service entrance of Baron Long's U.S. Grant Hotel. The doctor was waiting there. Did all go O.K. after I left?' he asked. 'Fine,' said Maize, the chambermaid, alighting from the ambulance. Jeb, a kitchen helper, followed her, fully recovered from his heart attack. Laughing, they entered the hotel while the 'doctor' took off for his pharmacy nearby.

Music, Maestro, Please

"Meanwhile at the tracks, Long's entry opened at 20-to-1 and Linden Tree at 7-to-10. Long bet $10,000 on the entry and the price on those two tumbled to 2-to-1. In those days before the electric totalizator, odds were computed manually and changes marked by hand on large display cards. Beron had a little villain named Giononni in charge of this department and had told him to be in no hurry displaying changes on Linden Tree. So the next price shown on the horse was only 4-to-5. At that price, books around the country held their bets.

"The race started just as the first trainload of bettors arrived. The field was well bunched except for Linden Tree. With George Woolf in the saddle, that one broke six lengths on top and won as he pleased. After the result was declared official, Linden Tree's mutuel was posted: $21.40 win, $2.60 place, $2.20 show.

"The books weren't worried, for it seemed obvious that this was a wire service error that would soon be corrected. No correction came. The Racing Form waited two days before publishing the price.

"An investigation was made and the stewards ruled Baron Long off his own track. A week later, though, the ruling was rescinded with the statement that 'we cannot punish a man for betting on his own norses."

"The screams of the bookmakers were anguished and real Not even the Metropolitan's Pagliacci with the great Enrico Caruso could equal Agua Callente's production of Linden Tree starring Baron Long in a countrywide chorus of bookmakers weeping in the background."

Jets' Defense Brings Back The Shutout

By GERALD ESKENAZI

Special to The New York Times HEMPSTEAD, L.I., Nov. 15-The defense rested today.

Some, like Richard Neal and Phil Wise, played cards and relived yesterday's 34-0 victory over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers-the Jets' second ahutout io their history.

"I figured," said Wise, "that some-time io my career I'd get a shutout. Did you ever get one, Richard?" "No, never," said Neal. "I was with New Orleans before I came here."

The shutout was the first for the Jets at Shea Stadium. Their other ooe was at the Polo Grounds against Kansas City in 1963. Since then, 180 games had elapsed.

It is herd to get a shutout, although the odds shrink if you play Tampa Bay, an expansion team that has yet to win a game in the National ootball League. The shutout was only the 17th in 140 league games this season, but the Buccaneers have suffered four of them.

Michaels the Mastermind

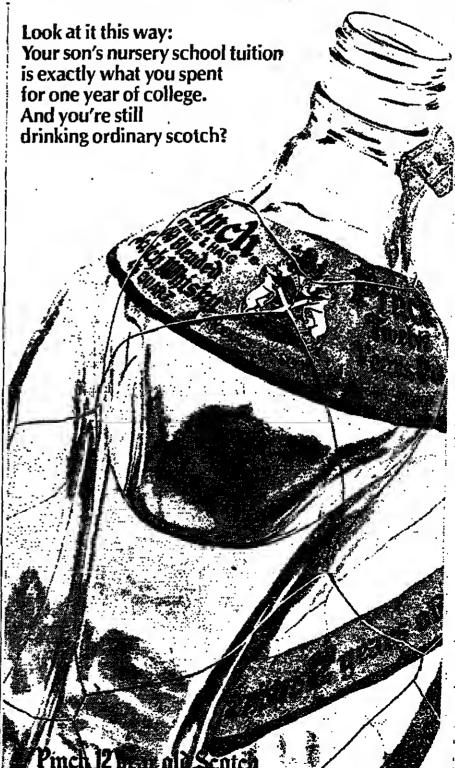

The only player in both Jet shulouts was Winston Hill, But he is a member of the offense. The last shutout also was masterminded by Walt Michaels, then, as now, the club's defensive coor-

"We didn't have that title then," said Michaels. "In 1963, I was the only assistant coach on the defense."

Luck plays the largest role, perhaps, in a shutout. It also helps to get a big early lead, thus forcing the other team to forsake the field goal and attempt to make the big play.

"For a change, we were in a choice position," explained Neal. "The New York Jets usually don't get the chance to know what the other team is going to do. But this was one of the few times we knew what the other team was going to try. In other games we would play against teams that had the

esevel 49ers-Rams Selected As Top Game Sunday

BY WILLIAM N. WALLACE

The big game in pro football this Sunday will be in San Francisco where he 49ers take on the Los Angeles Rams whom they defeated earlier, 16-0. The subcome will go a long way toward leciding the race in the National Conference's Western Division

About where the Rams hold a half-game lead over the 49ers. San Francisco has lost three Football in a row and the Rams two. That contest will not be elevised here and neither will Washngton at St. Lious, the latter a last-grasp affair for the Redskins who are wo games behind the Cardinals in he N.F.C. East. The talevision games here will be Houston at Pittsburgh fol-owed by the Giants at Denver. The Cardinals, who have lost only wice, would seem to have their confer--mee wild-card playoff position well in and if they fail to catch Dallas for irst place in the division. In the A.F.C. he Patriots are the leading wild-card ontender and some playoff fever has

There were about 2,000 fans at the ogan Airport to greet the team on is return from Baltimore after upseting the Colts. The players were assumed because it had never happened of them before. "It's nice to know meone cares," said Steve Grogan, the uarterback. -

But Sam Cunningham, Russ Francis ind Steve Nelson were burt, "We lost hree front-line players," said. Coach huck Fairbanks. "But the reserves had ine performances, especially Don Cal-

Who is be? A 12th-round draft choice, Brown has been on the team for two seasons and did some good work last nummer in preseason games when Dickey was hurt. The Packers will add another quarterback and have several free agents in mind

The Eagles are contemplating switchng quarterbacks, Roman Gabriel for Mike Boryla, who had a poor game against Cleveland. The only trouble there is a commitment to younger players by Coach Dick Vermeil. He has said that the trouble with the Eagles in the past was that the coaches never had the patience to develop young Gabriel is 36, Boryla 25.

There were plenty of plaudits for Jim Hart, the St. Louis quarterback, for his showing in the second half against the Rams. 'I don't think he has ever played better," said Harry Gilmer, the team's quarterback coach. Hart completed 13 of 16 pass attempts and he threw the ball away on two of the incompletions. His line helped as the Rams never were able to touch Hart. That proved a point to Bud Goode, the noted com-puter analyst. An adviser to the Rams, Goode told Coach Chuck Knox that Los Angeles would have to sack Hart at least twice if it was in win the game.

Goode equates a quarterback sack to be worth 2 points. If team X, for exam-ple, has four sacks and team Y has two, then 4 points should show up in the final score in favor of team X. Goode has other tenets. His mathematical analysis tells him that the worth of having more running plays than the opponent is I point; recovering a fumble 3 points; intercepting a pass 5 points and returning a kick for a touchdown 10 points.

In Atlanta nnly 20,058 turned ont for the Falcons' game against the 49ers on a rainy, windy day with the temper-ature in the 30's. But 44,393 tickets had been sold in advance, so there were 24,335 no-shows. And the Palcons won, 2I-16, for only their third victory.

What turned the Steelers around? Fear perhaps. In any event, the first five games, four of which were lost, have not resembled the second five, all won. The Steeler defense gave up 110 points in the first five and only .9 in the second five. In the last five they have outscored the opposition, 132-9.

Bradshaw, Pittsburgh's regular quarterback, applying an ice pack to his injured right wrist. The injury, a sprain, happened in the first quarter against the Dolphins Sunday.

Fans Are Flocking Away, Causing Concern in N.H.L.

The National Hockey League's board of governors is meeting in Key Largo, Fla., today to discuss hockey's most pressing problem, and the subject is not violence. Plummeting attendance figures are the main concern, and all but a few bockey franchis-About es have been affected. The Cleveland Barons, with an average crowd of 5,330 Pro Hockey over 10 games, and the Colorado Rockies, who have drawn an average of 5,572 in 11 games, are having the hardest time. But they expected to build fans slowly after moving from Oakland, Calif., and Kansas City, respectively. However, franchises such as Atlanta and Pittsburgh are doing poorly, as is Boston, where fans are still angry over the flight of Bobby Orr to Chicago. The Bruins are averaging 11,459 in a rink that can bold 14,597.

The clubs cootinuing to draw capacity crowds most of the time are Montreal, Torooto, New York Rangers, New York Islanders and Philadelphia. But elsewhere in the league the big crowds turn out in a very selective manner, choosing only to view strong visiting teams like Montreal, Buffalo, Philadelphia, the Islanders and Boston. The Rockies' worst home crowd was 3,763 for a game with Atlanta, When Colorado visited Boston Garden, only 9,968 were in attendance. A game Sunday night in Chicago between the Orrless Black Hawks and Los Angeles drew only 12,400,

"I don't know what to do anymore," said Cliff Fletcher, Atlanta's general manager. "We need to get some excitement going." The Flames' situation is puzzling because the team has a good chance for a playoff berth in the Lester Patrick Divisioo and has such colorful players on its roster as Eric Vail and Tom Lysiak, as well as the sharp goal-tending of Dan Bouchard and Phil

Myre. Yet the crowds don't materialize. Although the N.H.L. does not like to talk about merger with the World Hockey Association, the two leagues may find the dissolution of some weaker franchises and the creation of a twoconference league to be the inevitable solution to the woes of overexpansion. The clubs with the best records in the league are the Bostoo Bruins and the New York Islanders, and the similarities only begin there. Each club leads its division with 27 points after 17 games for a .794 percentage. They are the only two teams in the league that have yet to lose at home. Each team has lost only one of its last 10 games and each has scored 13 powerplay goals and given up 9. Wheo they game ended in a 2-2 tie.

Gov. Ella T. Grasso of Connecticut, an avid bockey fan, thinks a $135,000 tax break given to the New England Whalers is a "ripoff." The tax break was made possible last

Take a Glance 44 Ballet Past

By CLIVE BARNES

Special to The New York Times TORONTO, Nov. 15 - Yesterday afternoon the National Ballet of Canada, now in its 25th anniversary season at the O'Keefe Center, took an affectionate glance at its past. The ballet was the company's restaging of John Cranke's "Romeo and Juliet," but the performance became a collector's item not only because it featured some of the older dancers in the ballet, but also because the audience was full of the company's former members. And at the end they all trouped up on stage to take part in the curtain calls.

For Lilian Jarvis, who played Juliet, it was a personal triumph. One of the early members of the troupe, she had not danced for 13 years and she was making her debut as Juliet. It would have been a nice enough performance in any circumstances, but considering it as a return from long retirement it was little short of a miracle. The Romeo was Hazarof Surmeyan now a company teacher and mime. who returned to active dancing after a year off to give his last performance in the role in which he made his debut with the company 10 years ago. He was splendid—ardent in his acting, brilliant in his dancing.

Two other former members of the company, in mime roles, were Celia Franca, the company's founder and until two years ago its artistic director, as a finely dramatic Lady Capulet, and Yves Cousineau, still a great mime as

Clinton Rothwell had a busy but successful day, dancing a dashing Mercutio in the afternoon, and then coming back in the evening performance to give a decently malevolent Tybalt. The Juliet of the evening was Veronica Tenoant, who danced most beautifully. It was a portrayal urgent in its feeling and delicate in its dancing. Her Romeo was Frank Augustyn, who seemed far more at ease than he had partnering Karen Kain the night before, and the whole performance went with the right kind of tragic zest. Clinton Rothwell had a busy but suc-

Music: Berlin's Rapid Requiem

Von Karajan Streamlines Mozart's Soul-Searching as Orchestra and Vienna Singverein Hurry Up

By DONAL HENAHAN

The Mozart Requiem, inexhaustible work that it is, lends itself to any oumber of interpretations, but two extremes may easily be recognized. There is, on the extreme Romantic side, the is, on the extreme Romantic side, the kind of brooding meditation that Karl Böhm favored in recent years. With its sometimes ponderous tempos and portentous gestures, this Mozart Requiem paints a tragic picture of man's life and death, and is in a definite Germanic tradition. Other conductors stress a more

Roman Catholic view, giving us the Requiem as a service for a soul that has been released and transported to a better place. Mozart himself was a good Viennese Catholic most of his life, but he seems to have had his doubts near the end, so either of these approaches may be argued plausibly.
What this listener cannot rationalize, however, is the kind of streamlined, superprofessional performance led by Herbert van Karajan lat night at Car negie Hall. Mr. von Karajan, conducting his Berlin Philharmonic, the Vienna Singverein and a quartet of capable vocal soloists, rusbed through the Requiem in what surely must have been record time, missing interpretative point after point. He achieved

many triumphs of luscious tone-blending along the way as well as the requisite number of booe-rattling climaxes. The Berlin is a fine orchestrs—not perfect, as some sloppy trombone work in the Tuba Mirum demonstrated —and Mr. von Karajan has few pears as an orchestral technician. Nonethe-less, this performance measured up only in its parts, and did not add up to a deeply moving whole.

The soloists fit perfectly into the Karajan scheme of things, though Anna Tomowa-Sintow's soprano was sometimes distressingly thin and expressionless. The others were Agnes Baltsa, mezzo-soprano; Werner Krenn, tenor, and Jose Van Dam, bass-bari-tone, and despite their obvious talents, the cumulative effect was antiseptic.

The program's other piece, Bruck-ner's "Te Deum," gave Mr. von Karajan and his forces a more congenial score to work with Here, the listener could innocently revel in thunderous fortissimos and gossamer pianissimos, and trust that the Lord would be satis-fied with praise on the highest level of orchestral and vocal excellence.

of "Jesus Christ Superstar," will be a Christmas attraction at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, playing in the Academy's opera house from Dec. 23 through Jan. 9. The Andrew Lloyd Webber-Tim Rice work, based on the biblical story of Joseph, will be directed by Frank Dun-lop, who previously staged it with the Young Vic in England. Mr. Dunlop is also noted for his productions of "Sca-pino" and "Sherlock Holmes," both in London and on Broadway.

Music: 12 Cellos

Berlin Philharmonic Players Offer Unusual Program

By PETER G. DAVIS

One of the more bizarre spin-offs of the Berlin Philharmonic's current visit to New York occurred Sunday night in Carnegie Recital Hall, where the orchestra's 12 cellists gathered to perform a most peculiar program. The small auditorium (300 seats) was packed to capacity—mostly, it would seem, by the orchestra's friends and families since German was the pre-families since German was the predominant language of the evening.

Exactly how the idea of a concert featuring a dozen cellos got started is a bit vague, but evidently "The Twelve," as they are called in Berlin, have been playing with considerable success in Europe for the last three years. Perhaps the inspiration came from one Julius Klengel (1859-1933), in his day a famous cellist who composed a thremody for 12 solo cellos entitled "Hymnus," first performed at the funeral of the conductor Artur Nikisch in 1922.

"Hymnus" naturally figured on the program, as did an arrangement of a gamba suite by an obscure early baroque composer, David Funck (1629-90). A number of contemporary composers, it seems, have been introposed by the second composers, it seems, have been in-trigued by the sonorous possibilities of such an unusual grouping (and doubt-lessly by the Berliners' virtuosity too), and three of the works were composed especially for "The Twelve": "Melodia— Ritmica" by Helmut Eder, "Aubade" by Jean Françaix and "Blues Espag-cola Rumba Philharmonica" by the late Boris Blacher.

All of the music turned out to be pretty trashy stuff, but it did serve the purpose of showing off the kind of sounds 12 cellos can produce in consort. There was lushness to spare, pizzicato fireworks aplenty, all sorts of tricky antiphonal effects and in general enough busy work to keep each player on his toes. Needless to say, the Berliners played stupendonsly, both individually and as a group, but after it was over, one had heard a sufficient amount. of cello fun and games to last a long.

Governors do it. Ministers and rabbis do it. Show-hiz personalities love to do it. Good neighbors and friends do it—especially if they want to remain on speaking terms.

And, above all, fellow writers do it.
What they all do is plug one another's literary (and sometimes not-so-literary) works. Quite often they mean it.

The rave advance comment has become a part of tha mysterious process by which a relative handful of books become the talked-up tomes of the season. There is no harm done, except perhaps to the guilible reader who takes the word of publishing's pen pals without going to the library or bookstore and judging for himself.

and judging for himself.

The other day, for example, a heavy hreather of a first novel, "Blue Skies, No Candy," by Gael Gieene, who normally works the kitchen beat for New York magazine, came out with the usual ruffles and flourishes. The book itself received what the trade calls mixed notices, but the advance storments were brilliant. comments were brilliant.

'Outrageously Funny'

Among others, A. E. Hotchner, the Hemingway hiographer, called it "an outrageously funny and sexy book," Jimmy Breslio was quoted as saying, "If this is what happens when you let them out of the kitchen. I'm all for it," and Betty Erieden, the feminist-rights advo-Friedan, the feminist-rights advo-cate, said, "It's new and fun to read an erotic hook written by a woman, about a woman who takes extraordinary joy in sex instead of suffering it as misery."

surering it as misery."

Miss Friedan, author of "The Feminine Mystique" and "It Changed My Life," was only a hit embarrassed when asked to elaborate on her advance quotation, which seemed to be stretching the which seemed to be stretching the mystique to include what others have described as a rather raunchy

Betty Friedan "I do make it o practice to read o friend's book."

The notices were mixed, the comments were brilliant.

"The novel is a step in a positive direction," she said, "even if I don't agree with every aspect of it. It's an improvement over the masochistic novels exploiting sex. I seldom give quotes but I do maka it a practice to read a friend's book and, yes, Gael Greene is a personal friend."

In a time when the most influential hook "critic" is not a person but a hand—the anonymous hand that holds up the hook jacket for television andiences on the "Today" show, which publicity people regard as the best means of promoting a title and author—it is little. ing a title and author—it is little wonder that advance comments by respected oames are used to help get the huzz started about a hook. Commercial television reaches for viewers instead of the readers; hy comparison, quotations by authors who read and write are taken

Jessica Mitford sardonically sug-gests in the current issue of The Authors Guild Bulletin that pub-lishers furnish hlurb writers a checklist of desirable phrases for use on book jackets. Her notion resulted from the fact that when she gava an endorsement saying a book was "totally absorbing," the embarrassed author wrote back saying that the publisher wanted something stronger, like "highly significant and compelling drama."

"The checklist could be gradu-ated," Miss Mitford writes, "starting with such tried-and-true deacriptions as 'blockbuster' and ending with my poor old ineffective 'totally absorbing.' I believe this would save everybody a lot of time, particularly if the list were coded. One would merely have to notify the without of the code. notify the publisher of the code number (e.g., 1 for Blockbuster, 18 for Totally Absorbing), and would thus be spared the agonies of composition."

Game for Reader

The game for the reader is to attempt to read between the lines of praise, which is never less than fulsome. It requires a huilt-in de-tector to separate palship from selected quotes by some professional critics who, unfortunately, also oc-casionally sound like salespersons. Kind advance words come from

"Enter the Irish-American," by Edward Wakin, due this month, "eminently readable." Dr. Norman Vincent Peale describes Lowell Thomas's "Good Evening Everybedr" as "one of the most interbody" as "one of the most interesting hooks of the era." Dan Rather of CBS News calls the reissued edition of "Not So Wild a Dream" by Eric Sevareid of CBS News "a must-read."

Even Tha New Yorker writers rise to the occasion to celebrate the publication of a book hy an author from their own magazine. Renata Adler's novel "Speedboat," also in the mixed-review category, is said to include "a hrilliant series of glimpses" into contemporary life by Donald Barthelme, and to be "as hlazingly intelligent as any [novel] that I have read in years" hy Brendan Gill.

Probably the most honest quota-Probably the most honest quota-tion in recent memory was given by Groucho Marx when his own "Groucho and Me" appeared. Sup-plying his own, he said, "Not since "David Copperfield" have I read such a stirring and inspiring life story."

NEW HAVEN-Lillian Hellman's -"The Autumn Garden" is an end-of-Faummer play. Some of the guests may return to the Tuckerman house next year just as they have in previous years, hut the holiday-perhaps all holidays—is over. There is an asperity io the wind as these characters make an accounting of the bankruptcy of their lives—the lack of fulfillment that is endemic to everyone in the play. People do not change, the author seems to be saying, they simply grow older and become more ingrained.

The atmosphere is too acerbic to he Chekhovian—no plangent plucking of heartstrings, but whisky in the morning and epigrams and epithets as the sun goes down. The play, which was first produced on Broadway in 1951 and has now heen given a faultless revival by Arvin Brown at the Long Wharf Theater, is filled with some of Miss Hellman's sharpest and funniest wealth evenly. The play is very theatrical, at times to the detriment of its own humanity. Can such sad, useless people have so many insights into their own behavior? One wishes that the author had trusted her characters more and heen less concerned about traditions of dramaturgy.

Cleverness abounds, much of it

But "The Autumn Garden" reminds one of Miss Hellman's incisiveness and urbanity as a playwright and makes one wish that she were still active in the theater. If nothing else—and there is much more-it is a handsome opportunity for actors to work together as an ensemble. Unlike "The Little Foxes," this play has no dominant character but is instead an aggregate of interwoven personalities, each one feeding off the others. It demands a company of actors rather than star performers. The play is perfectly at home at Long Wharf. Actually there are two pivotal figures. Twenty years before the time of the play, Nick proposed marriage to Constance and then walked out on her. Now he returns with his wife and his attitude of self-service. For Constance, the homecoming could he—as she idealizes it—a source of rejuvenation. Instead it is a fruitless return to the past.

Carolyn Coates shows us that Constance is not only a hit of a fool but $50 a helpless little girl. Wisely, John McMartin plays down Nick's flamboyance, keeps him calarising from character, some of it low, and manages to give him an superimposed as if the author ingenuous charm. His Nick simply wanted to distribute the verbal can't help himself. The evening's hest performance comes from Josef Sommer as Constance's sardonic long-time suitor. It is perhaps an easy role—his lines have a hiting humor-but Mr. Sommer plays him superlatively. Quietly and gently, he makes us feel the roots of the character's cynicism, the inward malaise that forces him to be his own victim. On the strength of this and other performances, many of them in regional theater, it is clear that Mr. Sommer is one of our finest character actors.

Charlotte Moore instills the sketchy role of Nick's wife with humanity; repeatedly we wonder why she continues to be attached to her superficial husband. When she, Mr. Sommer and James Noble —as a general saddled with a flib-berty-gibhet wife—walk out of the house together to go on an all-day picnic, it is a moment of great liberation. We find ourselves allied with these three characters, wishing them to be free of the household's exasperations.

There is also intelligent work by Joyce Ebert, Susan Sharkey and Carmen Mathews, as a lordly grand dame. David Jenkins's set, a large living room and terrace, at the same time homey and just a little frayed adds an extra measure of authenticity to a thoroughly felicitous production.

Zukerman Offers Dual Talents A number of fine violinists are expert violists as well (and vice versa), hut not too many would relish the task of performing concertos on both instruments at the same coocert. Pinchas Zukerman is ohviously one who does, and Sunday afternoon at the Metropolitan Museum he brought distinction to both halves of his double assignmeot with Frederic Waldman and the Musica Aeterna Orchestra.

First Mr. Zukerman played Telemann's Viola Coocerto in G, then he returned with the fiddle for the elegant concerto snuggled into three interior movements of Mozart's Serenade in D, K.203. It may have been in questionable scholarship to present the latter score in such fashion—with the opening portion of the Serenade used as a kind of overture and the last four movments dropped altogether -but it was a delight to hear.

There, and in the Telemann too, tonal felicity was Mr. Zukerman's most persuasive ally. The viola sound was richly burnished, while the violin sang sweetly, suffusing the music with unburried charm. Mr. Waldman led supple accompaniments that did much to enhance the spirit of gracious eotertainment for which the pieces (at least the Serenade) originally came into heing, Mr. Zukerman, inciden-tally, refused to bow after the Mozart until the orchestra members stood up to share the applause. It was a generous gesture and, in this instance, an appropriate one.

Mr. Waldman gave several of his string players a chance for solo shining in the opening Concerto Grosso in E Minor by Geminisni, and he also led a pleasingly timhred performance of Dehussy's "Petite Suite." The program closed with Mendelssohn's "Italian" Symphooy, rather straitlaced, even a hit stolid at times, yet not without its bubbly moments, especially in

PLANT IN SIXTH STATE HAS MYSTERY ILLNESS

The Workers in All Make Electric Components, Use Some Chemicals and Are Principally Women

By REGINALD STUART

GROVE CITY, Ohio, Nov. 15—Katherine Francis, a 33-year-old salvage worker in the Robertshaw Controls Company plant here, has been feeling sick since August.

It is frequently bard for her to stay awake, she says. Headaches have become commonplace in her life in recent weeks, as have upset stomachs and more than the usual degree of oervousness.

The problems of this mother of four children would probably have been written off as just another isolated case of personal illness, had not other employees at this plant, mustly women, experienced the same symptoms of illness.

"When it first happened, I laughed at those girls." she recalled, when discussing the three sudden episodes of sickness on the job that affected several dozen employees in each instance, once in August and twice in September. Now, she says, the situation is no longer a laughing mat-

Other Similar Incidents

It is a mystery, officials at Rnbertshaw and occupational health specialists familiar with the situation here say, when asked about the exact cause of the illness. They only agree that the experience bere is similar, in many respects, to others recently reported elsewhere.

Episodes of suddeo illness on the Job.

Episodes of suddeo illness on the job, have occurred recently in at least five other states—Pennsylvania, Florida, Oregoo, Indiana and Minnesota. In each case, the plants iovolved are producers of electric components. They use a variety of chemicals to a limited extent in their operations. And women make up a materialism of the employees.

jority of the employees.
"What we are dealing with is a combination of bad work practices, situations in which there are a wide range of solvents used, bad ventilation and poor management," said Samuel S. Epstein, an authority in the field of occupational health and safety.

Dr. Epstein, of Chicago, was a consultant for workers at the Robertshaw plant represented by the International Brother-hood of Tearnsters Local 413. During the last decade he has been a consultant on occupational bealth issues to other unions and several Congressional committees.

and several Congressional committees.

He said that unlike cases of illness that have been traced to specific chemical agents, most of the more recent experiences have presented situations in which the symptoms — headaches, dizziness, vomitiog, drowsiness—are common off the job as well as oo and they are of a fairly short duration.

Causes Believed Found

Some companies, such as Litton Industries plant in Grant's Pass, Ore., and The Control Data Corporation in Minneapolis, fcund specific situations in their plants that they felt were the causes of the episodes of illness among their workers. A leaking tank, in the Oregoo case was replaced. In the Minnesota case, a change in the manner in which chemicals were handled resulted in no future episodes of illness.

But elsewhere, "a combination of things," is about the best explanation one can elicit from those who are probing

To the two Pennsylvania towns, Kittanning and Punksutawney, oo cooclusioos have been reached as to the causes of the illnesses, But the episodes have been stopped for all practical puposes by improved veotilation of the plants involved and some minor adjustments in bandling of chemicals.

Here, where company officials and union representatives are to discuss what long-range actions should be taken to eliminate the future possibility of the outbreaks of illness, the same type of action—improving ventilation and adjusting chemical bandling procedures—has been takeo.

And in St. Petersburg Florida, at the TRW St. Petersburgh Division, improving the ventilation was about all that officials could find to do after 18 employees contracted sore throats, nausea and fainting spells last mooth.

"There's oo question that there are chemicals making people sick," said J. William Lloyd, epidemiologist for the United Steelworkers of America. "A lot of people look upon these symptoms as not being serious because there's on evidence of immediate serious damage to internal organs," he said. "Bot we don't know what the long-term effects will be."

MEXICAN ENERGY PRICES ARE INCREASED SHARPLY

MEXICO CITY. Nov. 15 (AP) — The prices of gasoline, bottled gas, diesel fuel and electricity were sharply increased to-day to raise money to further develop Mexico's energy resources.

Gasoline prices went up 33 percent and some electrical rates were increased as much as 52 percent.

Regular gasoline, advertised at 82 octane, goes from 2.10 pesos for a hter—slightly more than a quart—to 2.80 pesos. Unleaded extra, advertised at 91 octane, goes from 3 to 4 pesos a liter.

In United States currency and measurements, the new prices work out to about 45 cents a gallon for regular gasoline and 64 cents a gallon for extra—up from 33.6 cents and 48 cents a gallon. Prices in terms of American currency were substantially higher prior to the roughly 50 perceot devaluation of the peso on Sept. 1.

Another round of price advances is expected in Mexico since higher gasoline, desel fuel and electricity will increase the cost of trucking and running factories.

We haven't missed a dividend since 1894

Rexnord-a different kind of capital goods company

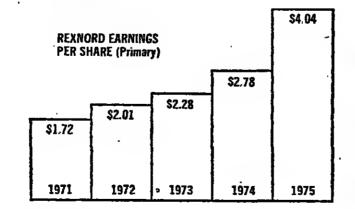

Rexnord has paid cash dividends to shareholders for 83 consecutive years, one of the longest records of any industrial company listed on the New York Stock Exchange. A long and consistent record of dividends to stockholders, through good times and bad, is an important investment criteria. We are proud of that record at Rexnord. And during the past two years the common dividend has been increased three times, to the current rate of $1.32 per share, a 22% increase.

Consistent sales and earnings increases are of course the basis of this dividend policy.

Rexnord Strategies Are Paying Off

Sales-1975 was the 14th consecutive year in which Rexnord achieved record sales. Over the five-year period from 1971 through 1975, sales have increased at an average annual rate of 13%. Sales through the third quarter of 1976 are $425,000,000, a new high for the period.

Earnings-Over the five years from 1971 through 1975, earnings per common share have increased from $1.72 to $4.04 per share or at an annualized rate of 17%. And through the third quarter of 1976 primary earnings per common share are $3.88, up 23% from $3.15 in 1975.

Industry's consumable components and proprietary replacement parts make up more than half of Rexnord's total sales. These are the kinds of products that must be replaced and renewed on a continuing basis. Unlike a major capital goods investment, the purchase of these essentials can't be deferred for long. A worn chain, sprocket, bearing or coupling must be replaced and Rexnord makes them all and

This emphasis on components helps broaden the base of our markets too. These consumables for industry go to a wide variety of markets, including agricultural production, food processing, coal mining, quarrying and rock crushing, other raw material processing markets, materials handling and many more. And this broad market base tends to reduce the cyclicality of our business. That's a different approach for a capital goods company... and we have others.

Capitalizing on Offsetting Business Cycles. In the U.S. our broadening market and product mix helps minimize the usual cyclical sales pattern of a capital goods company. In fact, in 1975 no single industry accounted for as much as 15% of our total sales. What's more, many of the markets we serve have offsetting cyclical patterns.

The business cycle of our Process Machinery operations differs from the cycle of Construction Machinery, which also differs from our Environmental Controf. Equipment line. Temporary softness in one business is usually offset by strength in the others.

The multinational aspect of Rexnord manufacturing and marketing facilities helps us serve world markets from the most strategic world source. And it lets us capitalize on the counter-cyclical nature of world markets.

Growth Markets and the Examination of Our Product Portfolio. A key part of our corporate strategy is to have the right products for the right markets for today and for the long haul. This requires continuing market evaluation in terms of current profitability and future potential from existing products. And we're constantly probing for new products and markets with solid future profit potential.

As a result of this strategy, we have made significant acquisitions in the U.S.A. and world-wide, and have disposed of product lines and facilities that didn't measure up to our long range goals.

It is this strategy which has permitted Rexnord to build a company well situated to serve markets with above average growth prospects for the future.

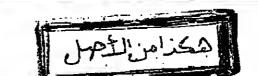

Expanding Our World-Wide Market Base. In 1975 sales of Rexnord products outside the U.S.A. amounted to over $200,000,000, an increase of 31% over 1974, and produced 40% of our pre-tax profits.

Rexnord operates 62 plants world-wide. Our world-wide marketing organization and manufacturing facilities allow us to serve world markets from the most advantageous source.

Rexnord and Tomorrow. Rexnord is a world-wide manufacturer and marketer of components and finished products essential to the basic needs of the world: The need for a sustained food supply, for raw material production, for preserving and improving the environment and for industrial expansion.

We have developed and implemented a number of basic strategies for the conduct of our business. They have proven right over the past several years and we believe that when applied with a flexible hand they will provide a prosperous future course for our shareholders and employees.

Write for more Information. These are a few reasons why Rexnord is a different kind of capital goods company. If you would like to know more, we would be happy to send you our new Annual Report and Corporate Brochure which will be published soon. For copies, write W. C. Messinger, Chairman, Rexnord Inc., P.O. Box 2022, Milwaukee, WI 53201.

By ALEXANDER R. HAMMER The stock market, reacting favorably resterday to comments made by Presi deot-elect Jimmy Carter, posted a moderate gain in continued slow trading. At the close, the Dow Jones industrial average was ahead 7.73 points at 935.42, its high for the session. Before the start of Mr. Carter's news conference at 2 P.M., the average was up 1.25 points.

Analysts attributed the upswing mainly to Mr. Carter's statements yesterday in Plains, Ga., that he hoped to avoid mandatory wage-price controls hy a voluntary commitment from business and labor to try to "huld oown inflationary pressure." He added that unemployment, now at 7.9 percent, could be cut to 4.5 perceot over the next three to four years "before excessive inflationary pressures will be ministration of Jimmy Carter, though it

The big man on campus these days may be the Internal Revenue agent. After years of neglecting tax-exempt colleges and universities to concentrate its audit forces on more lucrative individual and corporate tax returns, the Internal Revenue Service bas dis-patched agents to hundreds of campuses across the nation. The most immediate result has been to touch a tender nerve on campus by challenging free tuition for faculty children, a time-honored benefit. ... In interviews, university financial officers traced the unusual wave of LR.S. audits to the 1969 Tax Reform Act, which stimulated the revenue service's interest in tax-exempt institutions generally. After an intensive round of auditing private foundations, the LR.S. turned to other tax-exempt groups— with private colleges and universities in the forefront, school fficials said.

"I find it difficult now to find a college or university that hasn't been audited," said John Holt Myers, a Washington lawyer who represents numerous institutions. "Three years ago, it was hard to find one that had." For its part, the I.R.S. says the campuses are feeling the same heat as other tax-exempt groups. A spokesman explained the wave of admittedly tough audits of colleges as part of a broad program begun in 1974 to gauge compliance by exempt organizations. It included auditing every institution hav-ing $30 million in assets.

According to school administrators he IRS, auditors have challenged free tuition for faculty dependents, currently under challenge at about 100 institutions, Mr. Myers estimated. He said the LR.S. first raised the issue five years ago but then backed off. Now the revenue service is taking formal steps to require college teachers and other staff members to pay taxes on the tuition benefit. Under a proposed regulation issued Nov. 2, tuition paid or remitted by an institution tor deemed compensation for the employee's services unless the award were shown to be a bona fide scholarship. If adopted as proposed, the regulation would not apply to tuition paid or remitted before Nov. 2, or affect free tuition already promised for this school

Though word of the new pronouncement is only now spreading through university circles, their professional organizations predict an outpouring of protests. "This is an extremely highpriority item. It will gravely concern a lot of people," said Rachel Lowder of the National Association of College and University Business Officers to a telephone interview from Washington. The group has 1,600 members, covering roughly half of the nation's accredited institutions of bigher learning.

Private colleges and universities con-tend they are already beset by a severe financial squeeze. "Why now?" asked Roy O. Kallenberger, vice president for business and finance of Marquette Uni-versity in Milwaukee. "With all the independent institutions are going

Sprague's Surprising Turnaround

The General Cable Corporation's premium bid for the Sprague Electric Company, announced after the close of trading last Friday, powered Sprague shares to a 6% point gain yesterday at 19%.

The shares traded as high as 19% on a 309,600-sbare turnover to become the second most active stock on the New York Stock Exchange.

The action brought moans from brokers and investers who regarded the company as a takeover candidate some time ago and then lost interest after an unsuccessful attempt to merge Sprague, a maker of electrical and electronic circuit parts and semiconductors, with the Cabot Corporation of Boston . When those talks were broken off last May, Neal W. Welch, president and did not want to be acquired by anyone. Mr. Welch has clearly changed his mind. Tha announcement from General Cable's Greenwich, Conn., headquarters carried the endorsement of Mr. Welch, who termed the offer of $19.50 a share a fair one and added that the insider boldings, amounting to about 18 per-cent of Sprague's 3.5 million shares,

One broker who looked at Sprague's high book value of $15.83 in December 1974 and bought the shares at 5% for a quick profit said that Sprague was only one of 15 companies he then regarded as takeover candidates. Ironically, he owned General Cable yester-day—not Sprague—and thus missed the big action.

General Cable, which makes wire and cable products, was clearly pleased that its bid was acceptable to management, and little wonder. Last year, a surprise bid for Microdot Inc., a producer of ingot molds, electrical connectors and specialty fasteners, brought General Cable no end of trouble as Microdot mobilized a highly professional and costly effort to avoid General Cable's welcoming arms.

General Cable spent heavily to win its prize but lost out to Northwest Industries, which offered $21 a share for Microdet are $4.0 chere more than Microdot, or $4 a share more than General Cable was willing to pay. In the current instance, General Cable has not only obtained cooperation from its target but also has paid a price well above the premium it offered for Microdot. General Cable closed at 10½ yesterday, up ¼, on a 26,600-share turnover.

Dennis G. Little, vice president and treasurer of General Cable, noted that the working capital of Sprague was equal to $21.66 a share and it had a book value of $17.62 a share on Sept. 30. Sprague also owns 40 percent of Mostek, a semiconductor producer.

Few research organizations follow Sprague, which has been plagued with losses for years due to inefficient production facilities. But in a report dated Aug. 20, when Sprague was selling at 14, the Value Line Investment Survey said that Sprague offered "hefty" capital gains potential for the aggressive investor. The advisory service noted that the then current market value of the Mostek investment was about $10 a Sprague share.

"With more than 70 percent of Sprague'a market price represented by the equity in Mostek, we consider Sprague shares undervalued," it said. Value Line also traced Sprague's long battle with deficits, calling it the result

You can trust a Planner to be objective. He's not selling you anything. A planner does not sell insurance or make commissions on your stock trades. He earns a set fee whether he saves you a million dollars or a thousand. Nor does he create problems so he can sell you more advice. If he finds you shipshape, he'll say so.

If you own and operate your own business, a planner can belp. Chances are your life's blood is in your business, And your family income depends mightily on continned success.

If you're over fifty, yon've begun to wonder: Can I keep the business in the family? Can one of my children run it? Do I have a successor for myself? Or should I marge my company? Or sell it?

You are entering a delicate time when you must shift some of your eggs out of your one precious basket. U. S. Trust can help. We can find a way to give you cash for retirement even if you want to keep the business in the family. Or help find a merger partner or buyer.

Make an Investment Plan that Looks Far. Far Ahead

There are four main objectives to a long-term investment plan: (1) Protect your money and its buying power; (2) Make your money grow; (3) Get income from it; (4) Minimize taxes.

You must decide what you want your investments to do, and it isn't easy. The more you want your money to grow, the more willing you must be to take risks.

Reduce risk through diversity. The only sensible way to strike a balance between safety and risk is to diversify. The tough part is knowing how, when and where to diversify. This is where you need professional help. A U. S. Trust Financial Planner can draw on U.S. Trust specialists in economics, investment research and portfolio management.

Which investment categories should you consider for diversification? Stocks? Bonds? Short-term investments (such as Treasury Bills)? Real estate? Commodities? Options? Are you interested in insharing plan elections to use to cut taxes through a shifting of funds. The new law has a great impact on company benefits. 5. Beware the jointly owned property trap. Please Don't Die Without a Will

Unless you want the State to distribute your money. If you cannot think of dying, let U.S. Trust do this unpleasant thinking for you, together with your lawyer.

Check your will every time your life changes. When your family life or career changes, so does your financial life. New job, new location, birth of children.

The new tax law may require changes in your will. Our Financial Planners will review your will as a first, basic step. With your lawyer, we will help determine any changes your will needs.

eedham Discusses His Views Since Leaving Big Board

est Friday morning James J. ham joined a dozen other busi-executives, labor Jeaders and rament officials for a meeting of Capital and Technology Commit-in Vice President Rockefeller's conference moun in Wash-ington, Mr. Needham's ap-

It was established last 1st as a subcommittee of the Naist as a succommunee of the Na-il Center for Productivity and the ity of Working Life, which was set y Congress last year. If a new Administration coming lashington in January, however, it was apparent that no appealing riunities had come his way so far d he is becoming restive for some aingful involvement. The most at-ive he said would be several cor-te directorships, such as those as-at by his two immediate predeces-at the belm of the nation's largest k exchange—Robert W. Haack and eith Funston. Mr. Needham is now assing a few possible heard posi-im industry. nother possibility, though low on ist of priorities, would be a return high position with one of the major unting firms. That field had been pringboard to national prominence.

James J. Needham

He had been the New York partner of a Greensboro, N.C., accounting firm in 1969, when he was named one of the five members of the Securities and Exchange Commission. After three years there, he was selected as Mr. Haack's successor at the Big Board.

When he was suddenly removed from that position last spring because the Big Board's governors water some one less controversial for the new era dawning for the nation's securities business, Mr. Needham's first inclination was to seek a "less visible" posi-

"I bad seven years of high visibility," he said, "and I wanted to get away from things like Congressional testimony on tax legislation, securities indus-try matters and involvement in such ings as the New York financial crisis. But, after six months, I've changed my thinking. Now I realize I can live with that kind of involvement."

In the meantime, Mr. Needham has been quietly fulfilling his lifetime consulting cootract with the Big Board and biding his time. Except for occasional trips abroad—to Stockholm for a meetmg of the International Chamber of Commerce and to the Far East for a conference of the world's leading stock exchanges—be has been appearing almost daily at a new office on the 18th floor of the New York exchange.

Under his contract with the Big Board, the terms of which he refuses to discuss, there are only a few types of jobs from which he is barred. He cannot become an officer or a director of any other stock exchange or commodity market. And he can't become associated with any hroker-dealer or a firm that gives investment advice unless it is a member of the New York Stock Exchange. There have heen reports that the exchange will pay him between $300,000 and $400,000 for the remaining year and a half on his uncompleted term as chairman.

One possibility is coming up soon, Mr. Needham is scheduled to talk with a research committee seeking to fill a top post at a leading university.

While the 50-year-old native New Yorker, who worked his way up from a part-time job as a messenger at a major bank to high estate in business, Government and Wall Street, obviously is eager to hecome active again, be does-not express any bitterness over the events that short-circuited bis career at the Big Board.

"I never thought the exchange was a place I could stay for the rest of my life," he said. "The nature of that job made too many decisions unpopular amoog a membership of such diverse interests —decisions that were made not only by myself hut hy the board of governors. Communication was the hig problem."

How does he feel now about his bat-tles with Government ageocies and others over some of his controversial positions while heading the nation's largest securities market?

"I guess," Mr. Needham said calmly, "the big thing I learned was that, once public opinion gues against a certain decision, you should take a hard look at your position and see how you can accommodate to the change."

Mr. Needham's higgest mistake, his critics say, was his intransigence in battling the moves by the S.E.C. and the Congress to modernize securities trading —the move from fixed commissions to negotiated rates, curhs on specialists on the floor of the exchange, the effort to create a central market and recognition of the third market.

What does he see ahead for the securities husiness?

probably take a more important role in the securities business if the laws are changed. In certain areas, there will be a big confrontation unless the hanks decide they doo't want to underwrite corporate bonds and equities publicly." Does be think the two major New York exchanges will ever be fully

"For political reasons," he said, "I don't think that will happen very soon. There would have to be a more accommodative view by the antitrust people and the Congress. But the biggest single obstacle to such a merger was the opposition of the scatholders. A seatholder is really a partner, and he wants to bold on to his position. Privately, I always thought it be advantageous to achieve such a merger.

What's the next step? "Now that clearance facilities are being merged here," he replied, "the next thing will be international clearance. One exchange in Europe has al-ready asked the S.E.C. about coming under the commission's regulations so that its members can participate in clearances and settlement of trading hy wire rather than physical delivery

The former Big Board chairman said he believed there was need for more automation at the exchanges in this country. And, he added, the securities industry "should recognize it has a very short time to reorganize and, therefore, unify behind the chairman of the New York Stock Exchange. He eoded the interview oo a nate that indicated be still strong objects to Government intrusion into Wall Street's business.

He ended the interview on a note that indicated he still strongly objects to Government intrusion into Wall Street's husiness.

"It is time for the exchanges," Mr. Needham said, "to get together and keep the Government out of it. The S.E.C. is great at giving a sense of direction and great at reacting, perhaps more than it would want to do. But it is oot great at implementing change. They don't have the time and the people to do that job. And they can't sit down and design specifications for tasks to be done. The commission probably prefers that the industry keep

|$8 Million Is Paid To Addressograph By Xerox in Accord

By WILLIAM D. SMITH

The Xerox Corporation yesterday paid graph Corporation as part of a settlement panies involving alleged monopolistic practices and patent infringement in the office copier and duplicating industry.

It was the second such settlement in less thao a week by Xerox. On Thursday the Stamford, Conn. office copier and ouplicator maker, paid $2 million to the Dennison Manufacturing Company to settle litigation that began in 1967.

The Addressograph agreement did not involve litigation but came after negotiations that began last March, Part of the agreement involved transfer of patents and technical information.

Neither company would elaborate on the settlement. A Xerox spokesman acknowledged the company was involved in other patent infringement and antitrust actions but said that on legal advice he was unable to disclose names of the companies involved.

One of the companies involved in litigation with Xerox is the International Business Machines Corporation. Another is the SCM Corporation. A trial date in June has been set for the SCM action.

Over the last 10 years Xerox has filed several patent-infringement suits against competitors in the copier market. The other companies responded with suits charging Xerox with monopoly or misuse of patents. In April, 1975, Xerox settled its 1972 patent infringement suit against Litton censes and Littoo paid Xerox $1 million for rights to three patents and immunity from patent litigation concerning the copiers Litton was marketing. Xerox, however, paid Littoo $12.6 million for licenses to patents that had nothing to do with copiers.

In July, 1975, the Federal Trade Commission concluded an agreement on terms of a consect order settling an F.T.C. antitrust complaint against Xerox. Amoog route for the new gas pipelioe. Car-Rental Units Studied by F.T.C. Over Allowances

The Federal Trade Commission said yesterday that it had begun an investiga-tion to determine whether certain promotional allowances paid by the Big Three automakers to auto-reptal compaoies were discriminatory.

This follows on an iovestigation last spring by the F.T.C. into possible mo-popoly practices of the three largest rental concerns in controlling the car-rental husiness at airports. Last July the Hertz Corporation, Avis Reot-A-Car System Ioc. and National Car Rental Systemo Inc. signed consent agreements that provided they would not conspire to dominate the rental business or fix prices anywhere in the United States. In signing the consent decrees, the three companies did oot admit or deoy the charges. At the time Reuben Robertson, of

Washington, D.C., a lawyer associated with the Ralph Nader consumer group, protested that the decree did not go far enough and urged further investigation into the advertising allowances paid by the major automakers to the car-reotal

For example, Mr. Robertson said that Hertz had an agreement with the Ford Motor Company, whose cars it uses, for Ford to provide up to $10 million yearly for advertising that would promote not canly Hertz but the Ford name as well. He said that the Chrysler Corporation had similar agreement with Avis, which cases a large number of Chrysler cars.

CHICAGO, Nov. 15 (AP)-Soybeao fu-broiler prices were fractionally mixed at the final bell after holding a gain of more than 1/2 cent a pound earlier in the ses-

The selling of soybean futures followed a mixed opening and was set off largely by a quick downturn in soy oil prices. Commission house brokers began selling oil when stop-loss levels had been touched and prices quickly declined. Meal

A factor in the weakness of the complex was a lack of sustained demand. Some selling also was influenced by an Agriculture Department statement that 10 percent mure acreage could be devoted to soybeans in 1977 than the oear-50 million acres this year. The estimate for containing the containing of the complex consumer food spending would be up 6 to 7 perceot this year, the percentage of overall consumer income spent nn food would have to gn up 40 cents is expected to decline slightly from last year's 17.1 per cent. An Agriculture Department sales decline.

was expected to be the same.

Corn and cats followed an early demand in both pits that raised prices about 1½ cents. When the demand eased mixed selling sent prices lower.

The independent strength in the wheat pit was attributed to a light commercial in the commercial of the commercial control of the control of the commercial control of the control of lemand set off by an exporter. Sellers were very thin and the pace of track

At the close, soybeans were 15 to 23½ cents a bushel lower, November 6.29; wheat was 5 to 6 higher December 2.62; corn was ½ to 2¾ lower, December 2.32 and oats were 2¾ to 3½ lower, December 1.49½.

tures fell more than 23 cents a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade today and, except for wheat, dragged most of the other commodities lower.

Wheat futures were up 6 cents under e good, independent demand. Soybean oil fell the limit of 100 points while soybean meal lost $3.50 a ton. Oats were down 3½ cents and corn nearly 3. Iced broiler prices were fractionedly mixed at the opening of itiving.

Analysts reporting at the opening of Analysts reporting at the opening of the department's annual Agricultural Outlook Conference said their tentative forecast of 1977 retail food prices wao for little change from the 3 percent increase currently predicted for this year—far below the 8.5 percent rise in 1975 and down.

But Assistant Agricultures Set Richard Bell warned that farment are currently predicted for this year—far below the 8.5 percent rise in 1975 and down.

James Donald, an economist, noting this year's rise was the smallest since 1971, attributed the continuing dowdown in 200d inflation to heavy supplies. The 3 percent 1976 increase, he said, meant that food prices were rising at only half the overall cost of living gain and therefore "are olowing the increase in the overall cost of living."

Exxon U.S.A. Assigned Contracts For Two 165,000-Ton Oil Tankers

The Exxon Company U.S.A., a unit of the Exxon Corporation, said vesterday that it had taken assignment of contracts for the construction of two 165,000-ton tankers by a unit of the Ogden Corporation as part of an expansion of its tanker fleet. The expansion is designed to handle increased oil shipments from Alaska.

The two tankers were the final units of a six-tanker construction project that Ogden's Avondale shipyards and the Standard Oil Company (Ohio) agreed to in December 1974 at a total cost of about $400 million. Exxon said it expected to pay more than $6S million for each of the tankers. They are scheduled to be delivered from the Ogden unit's shipyards in Avondale. La., in late 1978.

Exxon also announced that it was in the process of chartering eight United States-flag tankers to raise its nearterm capacity for transporting Alaskan oil to the East and Gulf coasts. The company said that these vessels were heing leased from several owners and ranged in size from 38,000 tons to 115,000 tons.

New Wrinkle in Coupon Merchandising

By PHILIP H. DOUGHERTY Manufacturers' use of cents-off cou-pons, which grew 19.8 percent last year over 1974, are expected to increase 15 to 20 percent this year, according to the A. C. Nielsen Clearing House.

Altogether, there were 35.7 billion coupons distributed through various media last year. About 2 billion of them were redeemed. And it's their redemption rate and cost per thousand for distribution that are of paramount importance to marketers making decisions on bow to get their coupons into the hands of coosumers.

The common methods are through newspaper ads, newspaper Sunday sup-plements and free-standing inserts; magazines, direct mail and in-pack or Enter Dion P. Hallahan, who after 15 years in the direct response field, bas, with two partners, set up Boxboard Advertising in Hauppauge, L. I. His idea, a variation of the m-pack coupon, is to print coupons on the inside of produce packaging. The could be boxes, can labels, even plastic bags.

He will be offering a low cost ($2.50 per thousand) in a distribution method that generally has higher-than-average redemption rates.

According to Nielsen, in and on-pack coupons have a 17 percent redemption rate that is topped only by direct mail (11.7 percent) and populp inserts in magazines (9.1 percent).

However, in-pack coupons for products other than that cootained in the pack (this is called cross-couponing) have a redemption rate of 7.1 percent, which is still better than newspapers (all forms) and on-page coupons in

The first carrier for Boxboard will be Red Rose Tea with some 500,000 boxes, each carrying 12 coupons, print-ed all over the inside of the box, being distributed throughout the Northerst. The coupons are for products and two

The coupons are for products and two for direct marketers.

On the top of each of the boxes—where the shopper can see them—is the tag "Save $1.57. Coupons inside" followed by a list of the products represented. This will be promoted in the stores and, it is hoped, by the trade.

Participants include Colgate-Palmolive for two products; TV Guide with a subscription offer, and Lea & Perrins sauce.

The cost of inclusion in the program will also cover media advertising for the promotioo. Mr. Hallahan said he will definately be using television io May in the New York, Philadelphia and Bostoo markets, but first he's going to test market the whole thing io Albany using radio advertisiog. His agency is Mad Ave. East io Melville, L.I.

For the manufacturer whose packaging serves as a medium there will be ing serves as a medium there will be a double benefit. Not only is his product's sales enhanced by the coupoo offer oo the box, but Mr. Hallahan says, he also plans to divide his spoils with manufacturers.

He also said—and this is a little hard to believe—that Boxboard would be distributing between 300 million and 500 million coupons oext year.

Keeping Bells Ringing

Ma Bell (the American Telephooe and Telegraph Company) and all of her little bells (the companies in the Bell System) are beginning to learn some of the facts of competitive life. Now that clients can hook up other manufacturers equipment to Bell lines, Ma and the little ooes are adopting a more bard-sell approach.

Just such an approach was taken by Riedl Associates, a Clifton, N. J., agency that New Jersey Bell retained to do a multimedia presentation de-signed to sell and keep iodustries in the state as total Bell customers.

Created around the theme of ac-countability ("the commitment to deliver service even in the fact of disaster") the presentation is being shown in the Executive Communications Center of the Western Electric building in Newark to corporate executives from throughout the state.

Bozell & Jacobs, Newark, is New Jersey Bell's regular ad agency. But

Helitzer Is Chosen For Hot Items Toys

Now here's a hot item: Helitzer Advertising, special-ists in advertising to the young, has become the agency for Hot Items Inc., a toy company with headquarters in Newark He-dizzer said its new client willing be spending a record $1 million in TV this spring. The previous agency was Robert S. Block in Milwaukee.

The products involved—and five 30-second commercials have been prepared for each—are Crazy Super Soapers, Press 'n Blow Bubbles and Aero-Copter. Elsewhere in agencyland, Grey Advertising announced that it had become the agency for the BVD Company, a division of Union Underwear. Union was already a Grey client.

only Riedl carries the trademark "the synergistic agency." And you know what that means.

Free but Competitive

When Ogilvy & Mather International When Ogilvy & Mather International announced its plans to acquire Scali, McCabe, Sloves, leaving it not only almost independent but also competitive, there were many folk who believed the move to be a breakthrough in creative management thinking. Actually, O.&M.'s British company, Ogilvy, Benson & Mather in similar fashion acquired Davidson Pearce Berry & Spottiswoode and the two do compete. It was indeed the modal for the Scalideal, O.&M. says.

Diffusive Essence

Essence, tha magazine for black women, that is up 40 percent in ad pages this year, is increasing its circulation rate base to 550,000 from 500,000 in "anuary. It bas also established a fashion and beauty marketing department designed to belp advertisers with sales promotion and instore my with sales promotion and in-store pro-motion and teach them about this special market.

CHC Rebuffs McCall

The principal stockholders and offi-cers of the CHC Corporation, a publish-ing company, yesterday turned down e revised offer from the McCall Publishing Company to acquire a majority interest in CHC.

Petersen's Comeback

Peterseo Publishing was in a good position to get hurt by the cutback io automotive advertising last year, and was. However, as for many, 1976 is a come-back year. Ad pages were up 22 perceot to 5,274 and revenues up 23 perceot to $24.2 million for the fiscal year ending this month.

The magazines, almost eotirely devoted to coverage of the leisure field, include Hot Rod, Car Craft and Motor Trend, so-called huff hooks. But car and aftermarket advertisers also traditionally have used Skin Diver, Guns & Ammo and Hunting as well. So they got hurt, too.

It's Now Newsmedia

Shoppers Voice Inc. has changed its name to Newmedia Marketing Com-panies and is dedicating itself, io the words of Tom F. Hill, its chairman, to finding "new uses, forms and struc-tures of existing media and how to improve them as communications for advertisiog and marketing." Oh, that through, it will be a major problem to face this oow."

Mr. Kallenberger questioned wby the LR.S. sbould press the issue of tuitioo remission without also pursuing such practices as free air travel for airline employees or free use of demoostrator cars by aut salesmen. But the schools tax strategists want no part of that

"This is a different issue," Mrs. Lowder maintained. Tuition remission is indeed a scholarship. It is not a fringe benefit. It goes to the child, not

In one form or another, tuition remission has become the norm at most private universities and some public institutions. College administrators de-feod the benefit as unusually important to faculty members, who traditionally have relatively low pay coupled with high expectations for their children's

"It's a very important element in re-cruiting," said Allen Claxton, vice president for finance at New York University. Though some institutions limit the benefit to faculty and professional staff, any N.Y.U. employed or his dependents are eligible. Mr. Claxton contioued. He estimated that 1,000 employed dependents are eligible and the staff of the s ployee dependents were currently bene-fiting. The remission applies only to tuition—excluding fees or expenses—which is almost $3,500 a year for a full-time undergraduate. Some groups of institutions have agreed to reciprocal practices to widen the choice of schools for faculty chiloren. According to a spokesman for Columbia University, "If a Columbia professor's child goes to Prioceton, Columbia pays his tuition," and vice versa. At Columbia where undergraduate tuition is $3,990 a year, 1,000 faculting free. ty or staff dependents are eojoying free tuition, the spokesman estimated.

Not all private universities remit tuition, R. Jerrold Gibson, director of fiscal services at Harvard University, said the most it offered was interest-free loans to faculty members for their children's education. Even that smaller benefit — the interest forgiven — has come under I.R.S. scrutiny as a possibly taxable item. "They're among the toughest in the nation," Mr. Gibson said of the I.R.S. Bostoo district.

Factors in Paying Taxes While Abroad

The 1976 Tax Reform Act'a wellpublicized tax increases on Americans working abroad may have a less ob-vious effect — encouraging a rational form of robbing employee Peter to pay employee Paul.

According to Booz, Alleo & Hamilton

Inc., management consultants, oumer-ous American companies already pay ous American companies aready pay special allowances to employees assigned to countries with higher taxes than at home. But only a handful of "very sophisticated" companies has paid much attention to the bargaio enjoyed by employees stationed where taxes are low Booz, Allen says.

Frederick A. Teague of Booz, Allen predicts that more companies will take predicts that more companies will take those tax savings explicitly into account when setting pay for foreign posts. That is one way to offset the higher cost of their existing policy of protecting employees in high-tax lands—as much as 30 percent higher than hefore the Reform Act, he says.

But expine money is only one fector.

But saving money is only one fector, the compensation specialist adds. Not surprisingly, companies have found their overseas employees take root in low-tax areas and resist transfers. The solution, Mr. Teague suggests, is to make taxes interests. make taxes irrelevant by working out a defensible system of adjustments—positive or negative—that keeps all employees on par with taxes in he linited States.

In the talks to date the union has refused to go aloog with the leasing plan, which the fleet owners have contended would provide greater incentives for drivers and would insure profitability for the fleets.

Richard Decker, the manager of the Automobile Insurance Plan Services Office, the industry organization that administers the pool, readily acknowledges that the companies use subjective criteria, such as the length of time at the same address or in the same joh, the type of occupation and evidence of financial stability—in deciding to whom they will not voluntarily sell insurance. But he asserts that the wisdom of these judgments is confirmed by the fact that the drivers in the pool with no history of accidents or violations end up having so many accidents that the pool loses money

Appeal System Sought

Mr. Hunter, one of the foremost critics of the pools, insists there is a flaw in Mr. Decker's argument. He said that some of the people whose applications to the pool listed no history of accidents or violations were subsequently found by the insurance companies to have had had recommended in the counterpart, it could cost less to insure him. ords. The Stanford study also recognized that the whole statistical basis underlying the industry's classification system might be radically changed by conversion to notault auto insurance. Under a pure no-fault system, a driver would not be able to sue another over an accident, but would simply recover his medical expenses, lost wages and other damages

Under such a system, the low-income driver, whose lost wages would be small and who might get relatively cheap medical care, might cost his insurance company much less than a middle- or upper-income driver. Thus, even if the poor inner-city dweller was involved in

No change in Washington

An estimated 1,000 Presidential appointments will be made in the next 90 days or so. Yet, in the midst of all this change, a constant remains. The Wall Street Journal.

Election, 76.

Changes. At every level of government.

But in the midst of change, one constant remains. The Wall Street Journal.

Why? Because The Journal is the essential source of news and information. At every level of government. Administration after administration.

 The need to know. The Journal's special role.

Every business day, The Journal provides intelligence critically important to decision-makers. The Journal meets this need to know—and in a concise style that reflects an understanding of the demands upon a decision-maker's time. But, above all, a decision-maker needs to know the truth. And, in this respect, The Journal's reputation for objective, let-the-chips-fall-where-they-may reporting makes this publication must reading, wherever the business of government take's place.

 The Journal's constituency.

Of course, The Journal's audience is far more than Washington.

Beyond government, The Journal reaches a national audience of leaders.

For example, The Journal is the top reading choice of top and middle management executives in America's largest corporations, coast to coast. More than a third more such executives read The Journal than read the next most read publication (as compared to Time, Newsweek, Business Week, Dun's Review, Forbes, Fortune, Nation's Business, U.S. News & World Report).

A platform that provides stature.

If you seek to reach and persuade American leadership, The Journal provides an incomparable platform.

Official Washington. The latest study of the U.S. Senate, the U.S. House of Representatives, and a sampling of officials in the major departments and independent agencies of the Executive Branch—as listed in the Congressional Directory—618 decision-makers in all; with influence over an estimated $400 billion per year in Federal spending. You can get your free copy from any Wall Street Journal advertising sales representative.

Over five million decision-making Americans read The Journal.

They trust The Journal.

They see The Journal as essential to their lives.
Their trust, their feeling of confidence, flow across the lines that separate Journal editorial matter and the advertising which appears in The Journal.

The result is intense readership. High responsiveness. Belief. And measurable results.

Washington, 1977.

Americans have elected a new Congress. And there'll be new faces in Washington.

But in 1977, as in years past, The Journal will be the essential source of news and information throughout government.

This is a safe prediction. For studies of Official Washington's reading choices have consistently shown that The Journal is the winning ticket. No other national print medium (or typrogram, for the matter) reaches Official Washington so frequently and so effectively.

Ouestion:

Of the publications you read...which one do you consider most accurate and believable?

Answer:

The Wall Street Journal	54.2%
Business Week	14.6%
Forbes	3.2%
Fortune	. 7.1%
Nation's Business	1.1%
Newsweek
The New York Times (daily).

Washington's winning ticketand your winning ticket, too.

Reach today's leaders, tomorrow's leaders, with the publication written and edited to meet a leader's need to know.

It's the winning ticket—for advertisers who'd like to be the choice of the people's choice, in any year.
